

Nancy Taylor Graduates Offer Fashion Show

Some fifteen young women between the ages of eleven and sixteen, took part in an unusual graduation ceremony last Friday evening as they staged a fashion show for friends and relatives in the Nancy Taylor Studio on the mezzanine floor of the Manger Hotel.

THESE POISED youngsters had just completed a twelve week course called the "Taylorite" program of the Nancy Taylor Finishing School. The classes, which are held for two hours every Saturday morning, are designed to establish self-confidence in the teenagers, making them better students and happier individuals. Both the Nancy Taylor Finishing School and the "Taylorite" program are under the direction of Rochester Business Institute.

Among those graduating were Miss Susan Trybalski of 24 Klein St., a member of St. Stanislaus Parish; Miss Ann Williamson of 69 Rosewood Terr., from Corpus Christi Parish; Miss Annette Polizzi of 86 Creekwood Dr., St. John the Evangelist Parish; Miss Nancy DiMaggio of 201 Northland Ave., a member of Annunciation Parish; Miss Mary Lou Alparone of 14 Mt. Airy Dr., from St. Thomas The Apostle Parish in Irondequoit; and Miss Barbara Marrese of 207 Kenwood Ave., from St. Lucy's Parish.

All these young women received training in visual poise, which is the art of body control — walking, sitting, standing, etc. in their skin care courses they learned how to have radiant skin. In the sessions on wardrobe, they learned what were the most flattering colors and lines for them, how to build a basic wardrobe, how to accessorize a wardrobe and how to dress down—not up.

IN THEIR figure control classes, they were taught proper proportioning through intelligent eating habits and directed exercises. The social graces were not neglected as they became familiar with all that con-

Letters Voice Laymen's Ideas on Council

Davenport — (NC) — What hopes do the laity have for the coming Vatican Council?

In an attempt to find out, the Catholic Messenger, newspaper of the Davenport diocese, opened its letters-to-the-editor columns to comment on the council.

The response has touched on a wide variety of Church affairs, the editors report. One letter urged "a rethinking of the whole system of Catholic education." Another asked for the inclusion of laymen on diocesan councils and a simplification of breviary and missal.

However, the most common topics are the role of the laity and lay participation in the liturgy.

Comments included: "MUCH HAS BEEN said in recent years about the role of the laity in the work of the Hierarchy and in Catholic Action," wrote Stanley Grabowski of Cliffside Park, N.J. "Maybe the council could spell it out for everyone concerned; for laymen so that they may know where they stand; for pastors so they will understand the rights of laymen in the lay apostolate; and for the bishops so that they might use the laymen more fruitfully."

Stanley Vodraska of Lakota, Iowa, said he thought the role of the laity could not be clarified until "the theology of the parish" is more widely understood. "Secondly," he went on, "the role of the laity almost necessarily will be defined in contrast to, if not in opposition to, the role of the priest."

"I'd like to see the Church so unified and brought up to date," said Frances Sullivan of Oak Park, Ill. "that the word liturgy wouldn't be just a word, but an actuality, so that my family and I could actively participate in the fullest." Another wrote: "Pope John seems to favor greater lay participation in the liturgy, particularly in the Mass, as did the late Pope Pius XII. I hope that resolute action by the council will result in the Holy See's will being carried out in all dioceses of the world."

One layman, the religion editor of a 100,000-circulation daily newspaper, warned the Church to see to its public relations. Very often, she wrote, editors of the general press are frustrated in their attempts to get news from the Church, and the result is poor coverage or unnecessary antagonism.

Other suggestions called for a formal council pronouncement on interracial justice, a hard look at the machinery for handling matrimonial cases, dialogue with other faiths, and a modernization of catechetical instruction, the editors reported.
