

Transfer Credits In Religion

Behndji, Minn. — (NC) — The Minnesota State College Board will decide in late September whether an unusual plan to earn credits in religion at a state-supported college can continue.

Before the nine-member board will be a plan launched by Mankato State College. During the past year, it has permitted students to take religion courses from local clergymen off campus.

Denominational colleges gave students credit for the courses and the students then transferred these credits to Mankato State.

Catholic students took courses in apologetics and Scripture from the college's Newman Center. The courses were accredited by St. Mary's College in Winona.
