Convent Chimes

Better Use Tom-toms

Davenport — (NC) — Colleges and convents are often more modern in appearance than a Hilton hotel, but their telephone switchboards appear to date from Alexander Graham Bell's time, the news editor of a metropolitan newspaper complained here.

Martin L. Duggan, news editor for the St. Louis Globe Democrat, said in an article in the Catholic Messenger, "Davenport diocese newspaper, that he found convents harder to reach by telephone than almost any other institution.

"I have tried for days to get through to a certain Sister," bewailed Duggan. "My ymulsion has resulted in total failure. While Gherman Titov has been able to spin around the earth 17 times, beaming his voice all over the globe, I haven't been able to complete a phone call."

The newsman avowed that "a tom-tom network in the Congo" would be more efficient than some of the bell systems used by some religious congregations.

"Suppose you want to call Sister Mary Bridget about an urgent matter," said Duggan.

"You dial the number where Sister Mary Bridget lives, and a voice which I suspect is pre-recorded on tape answers: 'Just a moment please.'"

"A few moments later, while you have been listening to the usual whirring and buzzing that accompanies these Wells-Fargo communication centers, the voice says: 'Now, who was it you wanted?'"

"Sister Mary Bridget," you say.

"I'll ring."

"Then you are treated to the greatest sound of carillon chimes you have ever heard. It boggles you to think that a poor old convent would hire a special choir of Swiss bellringers just to call their old Sister operator may have to run that busy Bridget to the telephone for you, but that is what times."

The news editor claimed that he recently called another convent, and asked for a Sister, only to receive this reply: "She's making her 30-day novenas on the chimes. Also Sister's hearing is not what it used to be, so the switchboard on?"

Prayers Not Enough

Aid In Solving World Needs

Davenport — (RNS) — Catholic teachers and young people were called upon here to develop a positive social conscience in dealing with domestic problems and conditions in underdeveloped countries.

A plea to Catholic youth to involve themselves actively in wiping out disease, illiteracy and poverty was made by David O'Shea, national executive secretary of the Papal Volunteers for Latin America program, before more than 300 religious and lay delegates to the Catholic Student Week on the Law Apostolate here at St. Ambrose College.

He told them that "all the points in the world can't save a million people, half live in America, before more than 300 religious and lay delegates to the Catholic Student Week on the Law Apostolate here at St. Ambrose College.

Another conference speaker, Father James A. Anderson, a leader in the lay apostolate movement, suggested that the Catholic school system take upon itself a greater responsibility in developing an awareness of the needs of social justice.

The delegates from 24 states attending the four-day Study Week, sponsored by the Young Christian Students and embraced several other lay Catholic movements, heard the two speakers urge Catholics to be more acutely aware of social problems and to take an active and informed part in solving them.

No American's conscience should be at ease, O'Shea said, as long as the U.S. with eight per cent of the world's population, produces and consumes 50 per cent of the world's consumer goods.

"I'm sure that many American teen-agers get in a pocket money in a year than many entire Latin American families can earn in a year. In Caracas, Venezuela, a city of

Pakistan Rome Linked

Bombay — (RNS) — Valerian Cardinal Gracias, Archbishop of Bombay, returned from a visit to Karachi with high praise for the friendly relations which he said existed between Pakistan and the Vatican.

While in Karachi, the cardinal dedicated a new building erected for the Papal Internunciature there on a plot of ground donated by the government. The Internunciature to Pakistan is Msgr. Emanuele Clivio, who read a special message of greeting from Pope John XXIII on the occasion.

"It is comforting to know," Cardinal Gracias said, "that eastern nations which have recently gained independence have been prompt in entering into diplomatic relations with the Vatican."

Places are still available, and reservations may be made by phoning the Retreat House at BR. 1-8755.

RBI Student Rewarded

James A. Hahn of 158 Barry Terrace, who is a graduate of Aquinas Institute, has scored a "first" in the almost one hundred-year-old history of the Newman Club.

PRIOR to his recent graduation as a Business Administration and Accounting major declared here that people must live within the law and those who violate it must pay the penalty.

On the eve of his departure as Papal Legate to the National Eucharistic Congress in Santa Cruz, Bolivia, Aug. 10-13, the Boston prelate issued a statement critical of favoritism in the handling of auto violations.

"You can make all the laws you want, but you can't legislate people to protect themselves. People must learn through the process of education, or through experience, that in order to live in peace and happiness, they must uphold the law," he asserted.

'Fixing' Rapped

Boston — (RNS) — Disturbed by the part which "fixing" of traffic tickets plays in the lack of proper law enforcement, Richard Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of Boston, declared here that people must live within the law and those who violate it must pay the penalty.
