Better Home, Better Life Goal of NAHB

By E. J. BURKE, Jr., President, National Association of Home Builders

"A Better Home — A Better Life" is the theme of this year's National Home Week, which will be celebrated throughout the country from Sept. 23 to Oct. 1.

The most livable, enjoyable homes, in every price bracket, that the home-building industry has ever produced will be on exhibit during that week. It is the best time to see attractive new homes engineered to fit modern times within today's tight budgets.

E. J. Burke, Jr.

Scientists Test Materials
The production of better homes for the lowest possible price has been for years a major objective of the National Association of Home Builders, which, with its local affiliates, sponsors National Home Week. Research into new and better materials is carried out through the NAHB Research Institute, which has a laboratory at Rockville, Md.

As part of its better homes program, the NAHB has built four research houses, where hundreds of new or improved building materials, from entire walls to glue, are being tested by scientists and by families who live in the homes. Many of (the materials and products used are already on the market.

New Research Started
A new NAHB research project, started this summer at Berea, O., is expected to benefit home buyers further. It is a time-and-methods analysis, down to 1/100th of a minute, of every movement made in the construction of a house. Next year an identical house will be built at Berea using the improved techniques that result from this study. The NAHB will make the results of the study available to all builders.

In addition to contributing to better building methods and materials, NAHB is more than holding the line on prices, even in the face of rising land costs. A recent survey of our members revealed that the price of the typical home was $300 less this year than last. Last year the price was $15,200 for a typical home; this year it is $14,900.

It is in such ways that the NAHB is providing "A Better Home — A Better Life" for American families. National Home Week is the time to see for yourself the livability, convenience and comfort provided in 1961's homes.

HERE'S AN OLD LOVE WITH A NEW TWIST

... to initiate the opening of ENGLISH VILLAGE WEST, an important new planned community! Here's a new Cape Cod — the classic, trend-setting design which has always been a favorite everywhere. What's new about it?—Well, it's gotten some rather remarkable "face-lifting," inside and out—as beautiful as its practical. But . . . one look is worth ten paragraphs of descriptive copy. It's just one of four completely furnished and decorated models, now on display, at one of the finest new planned communities in the state. Curious? You'll only be satisfied with a personal inspection.

ENGLISH VILLAGE WEST IS OPEN DAILY FROM 1 TO 9 P.M.
ENGLISH VILLAGE WEST is just across the road from English Village proper. Take Mt. Read Blvd. almost to Latta Road, in the Town of Greece. It's on your left—you can't miss it!
