

Global Outlook Urged

New York — (RNS) — Catholic organizations must have a global — not a parochial — outlook to be effective in today's world, a noted Maryknoll missions expert said here at the 35th annual conference of the Catholic Association for International Peace.

Father John J. Considine, M.M., director of the Latin American Bureau, National Catholic Welfare Conference, observed that the "world has finally caught up with Catholic theology" in recognizing that political, social and economic issues must be met on a global plane.

Unfortunately, he said, Catholic organizations tend to lag "behind their theology and cling to national, parochial or diocesan set-ups."

Father Considine pointed out that the Catholic Church is "the largest voluntary agency in the world." Individual projects of technical assistance conducted by the Church, he said, total more than 450,000. Such projects, he added, can represent anything from a village leadership program costing nothing to a multi-million dollar university.

at the international or global level, he stressed.

However, Father Considine went on, the picture of Catholic organizations is quite different.

Despite efforts by such international groups as the World Union of Catholic Women and the Young Christian Workers, "a tremendous task remains to be done at the grassroots level," he stated.

Father Considine proposed a six-point program for rebuilding Catholic groups in this "new global structure."

THIS PROGRAM he defined as:

- 1) Planning and research for programs at the global level;
- 2) A basic world program to meet the needs of the earth's people;
- 3) Provision of professional and leadership personnel to the world's peoples;
- 4) Participation as Catholics in the main stream of world effort for mankind;
- 5) Global coordination of Catholic efforts; and
- 6) Education of all Catholics to the world vision.

All Catholic programs, Father Considine said, must be built on the "unity" concept — that all may be one; secondly, the concept of "universality" — to teach all men.

"Today, more than ever before in history, our Catholic organizations are ready to give a global dimension to their service of men; they are prepared to make it their ideal to reach all, to serve all, to win all," he declared.

Concert Debut

Sister Frances Cabrini, a young nun-soprano, stood back stage and nervously clasped her hands. At a signal from her sponsor, she briefly bowed her head in prayer, made the Sign of the Cross, and stepped out to the footlights at Boston's Jordan Hall.

Clad in the black and white habit of the Sisters of St. Joseph, she became one of the first nuns ever to appear on an American concert stage. Accompanied by Sister Margaret Williams at the piano, Sister Cabrini sang several selections, including Verdi's "Ave Maria." She was continually applauded by music lovers who crowded the hall. Her appearance climaxed years of study, including the last two spent in Europe where she gave two concerts before coming home. Sister Cabrini teaches English, Latin and music at Fontbonne Academy in Milton, Mass. Next spring she will begin study for her doctorate in music at Boston University.

Tertiaries Promote Vocations

Detroit — (NC) — The COP's of Pittsburgh were scarcely represented at the ninth quinquennial Congress of the Third Order of St. Francis here, but their work drew widespread attention among the 2,500 delegates.

The "COP's" are the "Crusaders of the Poverello."

This unusual group of Franciscan tertiaries numbers more than 100 members. Their ages range from 14 to 30 years.

Formed four years ago, the Crusaders' apostolate is to foster vocations to the priesthood and other religious lives.

According to one of the COP spokesmen here, Sheila Carney, "its most potent recommendation is the fact that it has channeled at least 200 vocations during its four years."

The two-day (Oct. 23-24) sessions drew 245 delegates from all sections of the U.S. and from Canada.

Other officers elected were: Msgr. George Evans of Denver, vice president; Msgr. Clement V. Basingel of the Catholic University of America, Washington, treasurer; and Father James McGrath of Philadelphia, recording secretary.
