

Church, NAACP Said Parallel

New York — (NC) — The president of the New York state conference of the NAACP said here that organization's work is in accord with Catholic teaching.

Dr. Eugene T. Reed told the Catholic Interracial Council of New York that the "program, policy and principles" of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People "have always been in line with Catholic doctrine."

DR. REED, an Amityville, Long Island, dentist, spoke at the annual meeting of the NAACP, which received the International Council's 21st annual James J. Hoey Awards for Interracial Justice (Oct. 28).

Dr. Reed, a Negro, is a veteran civil rights leader who has guided campaigns of Negroes entering suburbs to obtain access to housing and recreation facilities.

Muse, a former Virginia state senator, is the author of "Virginia's Massive Resistance," a study of segregation tactics in his home state. He has also developed outlines for the desegregation of Catholic schools in the South.

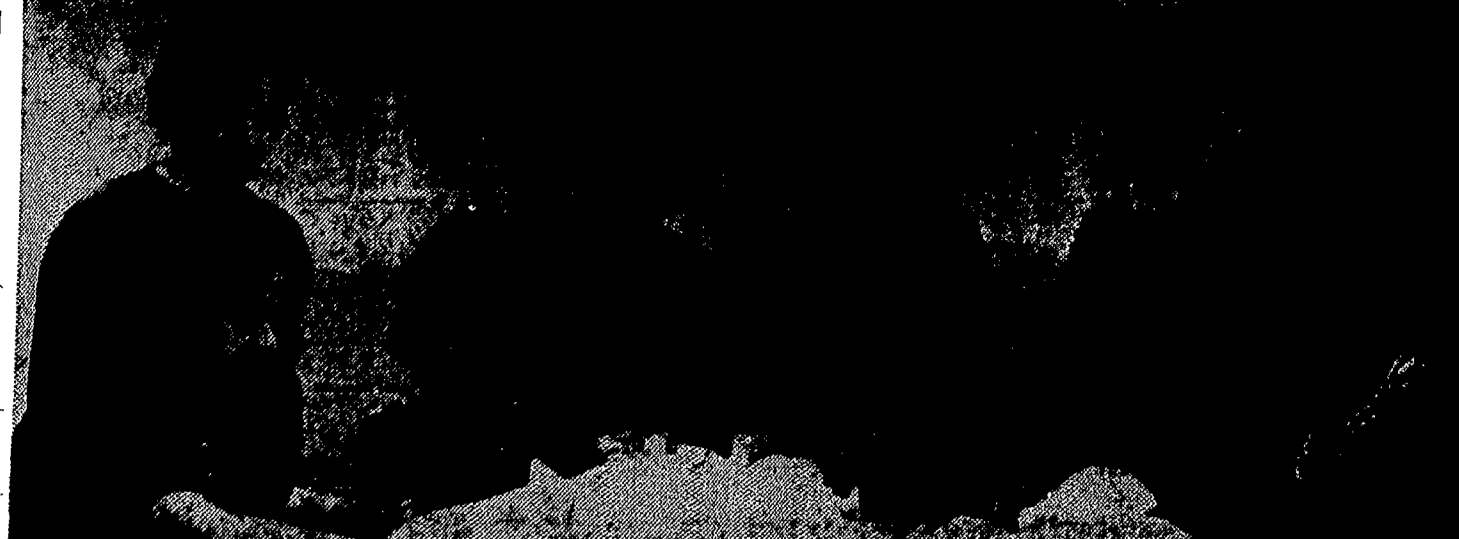

Dr. Leslie Dunbar, director of the Southern Regional Council, also spoke and praised the "magnificent spirit and mind" of Negroes engaged in the civil rights struggle.

Just What The Doctor Ordered

Davao, Philippines — Some things taken for granted in the United States, such as professional medical treatment, are still scarce in remote areas of the world.

For instance, a parishioner of the Maryknoll parish here of Father James C. Kalchauer, M.M., of Butler, Pa., complained of pains in his side. A traveling "doctor" advised a quick $50 home operation to remove the sick man's appendix.

Sometime after the "successful" operation, the patient reported to Father Kalchauer that the pains had returned. Investigation showed that the operation was only a surface incision as the missionary rushed the hoodwinked and angry patient off to a distant hospital to have his appendix removed "again."

Lay Missioners Sought

Washington — (NC) — Plans for a campaign to recruit 500 laypeople to serve in the American home missions in 1963 were disclosed here by the director of the Extension Lay Volunteers.

"This is not a program for weak Catholics," said Father John J. Sullivan of Chicago. "There is no room in the Extension Lay Volunteers for escapists who are running away from the obligations of their state in life."

The director of the program sponsored by the Catholic Church Extension Society which has headquarters in Chicago said the 500-volunteers goal must be met by mid-March, 1963, so that definite home mission assignments can be confirmed by June 1.

Father Sullivan spoke at the Catholic University of America here before a meeting of priests who have been assigned in their respective archdioceses and dioceses as lay volunteer directors.

THE PROGRAM director emphasized that only qualified laypeople who meet stringent screening requirements will be accepted.

"Our volunteers must be solid, balanced Catholics," he said. "They must be willing to give themselves fully for at least a year, leaving their homes, their families and their financial opportunities to give themselves entirely to Christ. In return, they receive only enough to live on — and the satisfaction of knowing that they are doing something significant for their Church."

Father Sullivan said the 1963 program will begin formally with a week of orientation on August 23, 1963.

He said that today there are some 180 Extension Lay Volunteers from 59 U.S. sees working in 65 parishes and institutions in Louisiana, Texas, Missouri, Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Colorado and New Mexico. He added that several other states and Puerto Rico will be added in the 1963 program.

Tax Funds Near For Birth Control

Chicago — (NC) — A proposal that the Illinois Public Aid Commission provide tax-paid birth control services to relief recipients is "against public policy and public morality," the Vicar General of the Archdiocese of Chicago said here.

Msgr. George J. Casey said that if the proposal were to be adopted, it would create "the strange anomaly of a state government interfering in a matter which pertains to conscience and religion." He noted that the question of tax-paid birth control services is to be taken up by the aid commission at its meeting November 9.

Msgr. Casey spoke to delegates to the midwest regional convention of the Catholic Press Association (Oct. 24-26).

In his remarks on the birth control controversy in Illinois, Msgr. Casey noted that misunderstandings have arisen regarding the reasons for the Catholic Church's opposition to such tax-paid services.

"Of course," he explained, "the Catholic Church teaches officially that birth control is morally wrong and we have naturally emphasized this for our Catholic people. But we by no means intend to impose or inflict our code of ethics on the general public. Our opposition to the proposals stems from the fact that they are against public policy and public morality."

Too Many People, Too Much Debate

St. Marys, Kan. — (NC) — Anglo-Protestant support of contraception is barring a unified Christian attempt toward solving the population problem, a moral theologian said here.

Father Gerald Kelly, S.J., professor of moral theology at St. Mary's College, said in a lecture at the college that "the morality of contraception" has today "become perhaps the strongest principle of division in practical moral matters in the whole of Christendom."

"THE ESSENCE of this problem," he continued, "is to keep a balance between the growing population and the resources re-

Cuba Reds Kill Teacher

Mexico City — (NC) — A woman teacher has been executed in the patio of her own home in Cuba for refusing to teach communism to her students. It was reported here.

Excelsior, Mexico's largest daily, identified her as Carmelita Izaguirre of Cienfuegos. Many women have reportedly died as a result of mistreatment in Cuban jails, but Miss Izaguirre's death is believed to be the first execution of a woman.

qualified for decent living. . . But there is one obstacle preventing a unified Christian effort toward a solution — the insistence in recent Anglican and Protestant statements that the problem cannot be solved without population control through effective contraceptives."

The Jesuit priest said the entire picture could change if "Anglo-Protestant leaders would come to realize . . . that in retreating from their traditional opposition to contraception they have actually set the stage for the destruction of other moral values they certainly did not and do not want destroyed."

If this realization took place, he concluded, "then all Christians could work together to solve the population problem as it should be solved, by increasing resources and not by decreasing human dignity."

Head Comes Home to Rome

Brooklyn — (NC) — An exchange between the Brooklyn Museum and the Vatican Museums has resulted in the reuniting of the head and body of a sixth century B.C. Egyptian statue.

The Brooklyn Museum presented the head to the Vatican Museums, which had the body. In exchange, the Vatican Institution gave the Brooklyn Museum a first century B.C. Etruscan terra-cotta head. The Egyptian work is now on exhibit in the Vatican, while the Etruscan sculpture is being exhibited here.
