Notre Dame Highlights

By SHARON CLARK

The parent, the student, and the teacher are all faced with the ever present problem of college applications and acceptance. Today, the closing college door presents a big concern for the college-bound student.

With these problems in mind, Brother James Madigan spoke to parents and students at the College Canvass held on Dec. 9, at Notre Dame High School.

BROTHER JAMES, a native of Corning, is now principal of Cardinal Mooney High School in Rochester. His talk was entitled "The Parent and Plans for College." Brother James, a member of the Holy Cross Brothers, touched on the financial and educational opportunities offered by the colleges.

After the talk, the parents and students were invited to the gym where there were representatives from various colleges. Refreshments were served and junior boys acted as ushers during the afternoon program from 3-5.

Even with college as their "spring love", seniors have been able to try out for the Senior Play, "City of Kings." The play tells the story of St. Martin de Porres, the first Negro saint.

Gift - Giving

HOW TO SUCCEED IN GIFT-GIVING WITHOUT REALLY TRYING

How to win in present-giving takes a little knowledge of the likes and dislikes of the men on your gift list. It also takes a little or a lot of cash, for this is the season to break into piggy banks in some cases; in others, it becomes a simple matter of all-out splurging. A quick-quiz before beginning will help. What sports does he like? Is he conservative or does he lean toward wild sports shirts? The answers will give you a good start on your gift hunt.

Skiing, for example, is as much a status and fashion sport as recreation. Certainly, it has brought about more sports-wear fashions even among non-skiers than any other sport since the golf craze of the 1920's. Here, you can choose from a host of ideas from parkas to ski caps, sweaters, goggles and even warm wool socks in bright colors or in Scandinavian geometric patterns. If you're a speedy knitter, you could still finish a pair by Christmas.

THE SOCKS, incidentally, will make marvelous Christmas stockings to hang up on the mantle and stuff with essentials that a man always needs, such as razor blades and shaving cream. How about the new adjustable razor with super blades and shaving cream? This gaga gift set in its outer gift carton of rich copper tone is one any man would be tickled out of his slippers to receive. A quick trip to the nearest drug store will do the trick easily.

Surprise the man of your life with a whopping supply of super blue blades among his Christmas loot. If you want to do something extra special, give him the aristocrat gold plated adjustable razor. It's slim, sleek and lightweight and has a dial in the handle that permits blade adjustment for any beard. It comes with ten blades in a jewel-like gift box, costs but five dollars yet looks like a million. This is the type of gift that isn't likely to go back to the store after Christmas!

Promoting a family sport either one that Dad likes already or one has often threatened to take up to give him exercise, such as ice skating or bowling, will suggest other gift ideas. A jacket and skates are gifts that can launch a sport the whole family can enjoy all winter long. For the man who goes to work in all kinds of weather, sometimes shoveling the snow from the driveway both before and after, a zip-lined all-weather coat, as pictured will be warmly welcomed.

THE WARM pile lining zips out, come Spring, to show a colorful cotton lining. This coat is treated with Scotchgard rain and stain repeller. This means it will repel rain and stains including the oil-borne varieties. And if you recall only two vividly how annoyed Dad was the last time he had the coat cleaned and found it had lost its repellency, don't worry. It won't happen with this durable water repellency which will last through repeated washings and dry cleanings.

These suggestions are prac-
