Youth Active Despite Handicap

Corning — Losing an arm in an accident as a child has not dampened the spirits of a local teenager for activities in his church, school, athletic field or work areas. In fact he has served as an altar boy at St. Mary's Church for several years, played baseball on several teams, delivers papers and in general, keeps up with the "other boys" even though now reaching the ripe age of 16.

A lad of five is busily helping his dad on the farm. It's summertime, the world is young and he's got a lot of growing up to do.

SUDDENLY, a machine clutches him and there's a nap-announced today.

What does he do now? How much growing up does he have to do? For some people, life is not all practical purposes, tends to end with that moment — the moment of realization that one is "handicapped."

That's not the way it was with Richard Birse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Birdall of 187 W. First St. This shattering experience happened to Richard 11 years ago. Now, as he approaches his 16th birthday, he is an example to people everywhere of what a person can do in different communities. The when he refuses to learn the meaning of the word "quit."

Richard proceeded to educate League baseball team and his left hand to do the job of earned a post at first base. Like most boys, Richard After three years of Little League ball, he has gone on to three more in Babe Ruth play southpaw and learned how to catch and throw a ball quickly with the aid of a tricky shuffle.

Not too long after his accident, he tried out for a Little League baseball team and his left hand to do the job of earned a post at first base. Richard has been an altar boy for several years at St. Mary's Church and has been a newspaper carrier for the Corning Leader for more than three years. He also likes to golf and swim and plays a bit of tennis. His active ways probably stem, in part, from trying to keep up with his four sisters and one brother.

In the classroom Richard says his grades are average and confesses that, like most average students, he has his "problem" subjects. His favorite course is history and he expresses a desire to go on to college and perhaps into teaching after graduates from East High School in 1956.

Whatever he decides to do after high school, those who know him feel confident that he will succeed. They are equally sure that he will continue to be where of what a person can do in different communities. The when he refuses to learn the meaning of the word "quit."
