Beauty Parade

By LOUISE WILSON

Louise Wilson, Women's Editor, is heard six days each week on WHAM, 9:25 - 9:55 a.m.

It was just 24 years ago this very week that an event occurred which changed the lives of women all over the world! A department store in Wilmington, Delaware, sold hosiery made of NYLON for the first time. Made of a fiber described as a combination of coal, air, and water, 780,000 pairs of nylons were sold that very day! One of the most fascinating aspects was the fact they could be washed and dried in half an hour!

But the practical aspects of nylons soon became secondary to the more glamorous features. Shades and textures became very sophisticated as the years rolled by. And for the most part, America's legs preferred seamless stockings. Struggling to keep that seam perfectly straight, the act of reaching over, twisting the evasive seam was unbecoming at best. Also, the new fabrics, with great surface interest, demand textured stockings.

The new shades, 34 years later, are causing a great deal of comment and interest. An exotic brown shade looks marvelous with bronze, brass browns and scarab green in costumes and shoes. Nile, a misty taupe with green undertones complements the green taupes and seaweed browns. Lotus is a smart bronze shade for golden tans, amber and honey. Then there's a brown shade for sleek black and charcoal brown.

Just as nylons have taken on new textures and shade in 34 years, so has jewelry learned a few tricks. This is particularly true in a discovery I made in nearby Newark within the last few days: An exciting new necklace with earrings cleverly called "Fashion Parade" by the fashion coordinator, Aileen Van Tyle. A double strand, one of pearls, the other of links, has a series of golden catches which makes it possible to be worn a dozen different ways!

Worn together it becomes a lariat to be worn with a sweater; doubled over with the short or ends dangling down the back of a formal it does day and night duty. Wrapped around the wrist, it becomes a gorgeous bracelet. Unhook the pearls from the linked chain, each is elegant and simple by itself. For fun and fancy, Fashion Parade is a wonderfully versatile ensemble and proves as Aileen Van Tyle maintains, "The priceless look of beauty is seldom a matter of price!"

In our quest for the new, exciting in fashion and beauty, we found within the last week a little sleight-of-hand golden compact aptly named Elegant Oval. Small enough to be "palmed," yet deep enough to do its job perfectly, this delightful vanity is artfully domed and elegantly crested. Complete with beveled mirror and fluffy puff and presented in its own flannel jeweler's case to protect it, it's a true treasure.

There's treasure within the Elegant Oval for it contains velvety Superflow pressed powder in a fashion-wise range of flattering shades for complexion perfection wherever you go. And of course it's refillable. There's an extra added feature in the form of fabulous Super Lumium lipstick. Such glamorous go-togethers comprise an elegant duet. Frankly, when it comes to gift-giving occasions—these charming purse pretties are sure to please! For information on these products call BA 5-6210.

Disc Notes

From Paul Contestable

(Guest columnist for this week's Disc Notes is Sister Rose Alice, S.S.J., instructor in music at Nazareth College.)

Bach: The Six Partitas — Glenn Gould, Pianist (Columbia Masterworks) — There are purists who are convinced that the piano cannot render the true sound of Bach, that only the harpsichord (for which Bach wrote) can reproduce the sheer beauty of his polyphonic texture. Most listeners agree, however, that, if the performing artist knows and loves this music and understands his instrument's limitations, the piano can carry the intricacies of sound as purely as a harpsichord. To these people, Glenn Gould may well be the master interpreter of Bach presently recording.

Gould has been accused of eccentricities and histrionics in his performances; he injects a tremendous physical energy into the production of a veritable web of sound. Indeed, he almost seems to be spinning it from the first simple thread of sound and movement grow into statement into a fabric in which tumultous and overpowering patterns—alway governed, however, by a marvelously controlled design.

If his presence on the stage is a distraction to his accusers, then they should rush out to buy his albums, because a greater musical control could hardly be found. And since there can be no true rendering of Bach without a mastery of every technical and musical device at a pianist's disposal, Gould, regardless of his contortions while playing, undoubtedly stands as one of the greatest Boch interpreters from the point of view of technique.

These partitas—the German equivalent of the Frenchsuite—are a collection of dances. Bach grouped them with an opening movement, followed by the traditional Allemande, Courante, Sarabande, Minuet and Gigue, with some few variations from that order, all in the same key.

Each partita has its own peculiar flavor or "atmosphere," to use Gould's own word. The sonorities of the No. 2 in C minor, for instance, are almost melancholic, if Bach could ever descend into melancholy. Gould gives a reflective pensiveness to the slower movements, while the virtuosity of the rapid passages never loses a certain piquancy of "gaiety in the minor."

By contrast, the No. 5 in G Major almost leaps off the turntable in an absolute buoyancy of baroque ebullience. In each of the partitas, there is a clarity of interpretation, a uniformity of touch and tempo, a pianistic control of infinitesimal dynamic variations which will delight any lover of Bach.

The listener is advised on the jacket that the piano is "fixed." (The fact is given in a very informative interview with Gould which is printed on the inside of the double sleeve; a fascinating discussion of the relative merits of piano over harpischord for Bach should certainly put an end to that argument for years to come!) According to the performer himself, the fixed piano "tends to have a mechanism rather like an automobile without power steering; you are in control, not it; it doesn't drive you, you drive it." The result is a faintly more percussive tone than we usually associate with a piano, a sound less lush than the traditional richness of piano quality. Yet it is a happily baroque quality; there is a lucidity which can carry enormous convolutions with ease and transparency.

If the baroque (which might be defined as "unnecessarily beautiful"?) holds any appeal for the average music lover, if the architectonics of beautiful sounds can bring satisfaction, both cerebral and emotional, to the harassed twentieth-century spirit, then this cutting of the seldom-heard partitas should be a happy choice for listening.

Theatre Guide

(Catholics are reminded of a recent Legion of Decency advisory to avoid "not listed" films. Such films are usually the products of firms which fail to submit their films for Legion of Decency reviews. All major U.S. producers do cooperate with the Legion so it is a mark of loyalty to them as well as to one's pledge to see only those films rated acceptable by the Legion of Decency. Such action would also be an effective remedy for much of the current turmoil in the Rochester area about how best to curtail objectionable shows at drive-in theaters. — Editor's Note.)

Mystery Set At Notre Dame High, Elmira

By BECKY CHAVKA

Did Karen Andre commit a murder, or not? is the question that must be answered by the jury at the Notre Dame Auditorium on Nov. 22 at 8 p.m. when "The Night of January 16" is presented.

The role of Karen will be played by Kathleen King.

The jurors are selected from the audience and the audience generally leaves the theatre

after the performances debating the correctness of the verdict. The play is built in such a way that the evidence of the defendant's guilt or innocence is evenly balanced and the decision will have to be based on the jurors' own feelings toward the case, upon the jurors' own characteristics.

The two parties opposed in the trial are as radically antagonistic as will be members of the audience and the men and women who will serve on the jury. Either decision will bring the protest of the opposite side, the case will be a challenge bound to arouse arguments and discussion, for its underlying conflict is the eternal conflict of two definite types of humanity. It is thus really the audience that is put on trial.

Ballet Folklorico

The colorful Ballet Folklorico of Mexico will be presented at the Eastman Theatre on Monday, Nov. 4.
