

Baptist Colleges Seek Aid

Washington (NC)—The heads of two Baptist colleges held a conference here Friday to seek federal construction help under the new college aid program despite past stands against such assistance.

Walter E. Hicks of Kalamazoo College, an 840-student educational school in Michigan, told the meeting of the Council of Protestant Colleges and Universities his board of trustees had approved the move.

"Our decision," he said, "was based on the reasoning that if you can't beat them, join them."

J. Ollie Edmund of Stetson University, a 1,971-student Southern Baptist school with campuses in both Deland and Petersburg, Fla., said "we are going to move rapidly at Stetson to get loans" from the government.

"I would hate for us," he said, "to stand by and see a great procession for education move by and then for us to say that we won the battle for a principle (Church-State separation), but lost it for education."

The new federal program offers either modest outright grants or larger repayable loans to help finance a portion of the construction costs of non-religious academic facilities. The priority for funds allocated to each state is determined by a state commission representing higher education.

'Little Me', Sid Caesar Slated At Auditorium

One of the biggest musical comedies to tour coast-to-coast in many seasons wears the modest title of 'Little Me,' and it will come to the Auditorium Theatre Thursday night, Jan. 29, for three nights and a Saturday matinee.

Sid Caesar, stage, screen and television star, will play the seven roles he created for the Patrick Dennis comedy on Broadway. Other original tunes he has composed here include Virginia Martin, Nancy Andrews and the dancing girl, Sven Swenson.

'Little Me' is based on the best-seller novel by Patrick Dennis. Author of the musical book is Neil Simon who wrote the popular 'Milk and Honey' and 'The Odd Couple' which were by Cy Coleman and Carolyn Leigh whose previous Broadway hit was 'Wildcat'.

Fauser and Martin produced Little Me. Their previous Broadway hits include 'How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying', 'Where's Charley', 'Guys & Dolls', 'Silk Stockings', 'The Boy Friend', and 'Can-Can'.

The seven separate roles by Sid Caesar in 'Little Me' run the time span from a 16-year-old student to a rich octogenarian. Belle's role is played by both Virginia Martin and Nancy Andrews. Musical numbers in the show production include 'Real Eiza Girl', 'The Other Side of the Tracks', 'I Love You, Merle', and the famous 'Bee-Boo-Boo' number.

Little Me's reputation for having been the greatest-dancing show of the recent Broadway season derives from the work of the noted choreographer Bob Fosse who also assisted Cy Feuer with the musical's total direction. Robert Randolph did the elaborate scenery and Robert Fletcher designed the opulent costumes. Four railroad baggage cars are required to move the big show's physical production.

At Our Homes

'The Cobber Gold'

By MARY TIMMY DAILY

"The more blessed to give than to receive?"

No one, probably, could argue with this tenet, in theory at least in general practice.

However, there are exceptions. One came to light at our house recently, at other houses, even at a rectory.

As to the "giving" bit, our grandson Timmy developed a cold, one of those sniffling jobs to which year-olds are prone: sneezes, runny nose, general malaise. The new accomplishment of walking was temporarily abandoned. All he wanted was to be cuddled in his mother's arms, or snuggled up to his grandfather.

"Don't let him sneeze at you, Daddy," Mary warned the Head of the House. "One cold in this house is enough."

Not sure to be dictated to, the Head of the House scoffed at the warning.

"We're doing all right, aren't we Timmy?" he said. "Little baby germs like yours are just—well, just little baby germs. I would give you a cold if I had one. But you give me a cold? Non-sense!"

If it can happen here, it did.

WAKING WITH a volcanic sneezing spell, a head the size of a football, a nose resembling Niagara, the Head of the House decided that he might stay in bed "for an hour or so till I get this thing licked." Blamed was everything from the open window on the left to a shoe that needed repair, to changing a tire in the snow—everything and anything but "those baby germs."

"Should a big bore caution," he readily confessed: "Bus windows, leaky shots, changing tires—no good in this weather. How's Tibby's gold?"

Midge assured him from a safe distance that Tibby's cold was "not that bad," but a great deal of it had gone, though diplomatically she refrained from saying what it had gone.

"Baby germs, not long getting rid of 'em," the Head of the House whizzed.

At the Head of the House sat glumly reading in October, 1961, copy of Spauld Illustration. He was also wearing, and wondering.

"Maybe you're right, Father," he said. "Could he be worn on the receiving end—all of us dealing with kids laden with gold."

"You mean..."

"I mean, this is one of your beatitudes, or whatever, you call 'em. You know, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.' That's a beautiful, in reverse."

"That's a bawdy—you know, MAXIMUS—not a beatitude," the priest said.

"Let's put it this way, Father," said the Head of the House. "Far as kids are concerned, it's more blessed to give—gold—that to receive one. But honestly, they give so much more..."

"I'll buy that one," filled the parson "Uncle Frank," as he went in to see the parson about his "gold."
