

At Our House

Splits 'N Smokes For Two

It was mid-Saturday afternoon in a popular ice cream parlor. Next to us, at two tables in their teens, came their mother's delight of teenagers as long as memory served. ...

Against all odds, the girls' report on the study of the habits of smoking, which was published in the magazine, "Teenage," took another long look, rolling every ivory mouthful. ...

ETIQUETTE BOOKS to the contrary notwithstanding, this is probably the best way to enjoy the cream—at least, it seems to be the most natural and unobtrusive way. ...

While we aged ones enjoyed a more modest treat, the girls finally polished off their splits. Then came the melon-ophos: teenagers geared to the artificial, wiping lips, naturally pink, each unconquered. ...

Perhaps, but the incongruity of it all was rather startling.

Will the psychology of America be affected by the Committee's report? Will parents accept the committee's findings sufficiently to try to keep youngsters from smoking? ...

The tobacco industry and its $7 million-a-year take has probably received a severe shock. But so, too, have parents of young people who, with the present trend, see their children exposed to shortened life and the agonies of debilitating disease. ...

Following Benediction, the group watched the Scuba Divers of the Rochester Police Department perform their life-saving skills, according to chairman Robert Hofford and Harold K4.

PRIZES FOR the Family Essay contest were also awarded to the following: Richard Corri and Brian Kavanagh for the public schools; Arthur DiCicco, Robert Forino and Thomas Gallego from St. Ann's School. ...
