Long Island Diocese Gives Family Planning Info

Rockville Centre—(NC)—The Diocese of Rockville Centre is launching a "Family Planning Information Center" to give married couples information about "the morally acceptable use of the rhythm system."

Bishop Walter P. Kellenberg of Rockville Centre said the new facility will be established as a pilot project at Mercy Hospital here if it proves a success other such centers will be established throughout the diocese.

The center will be staffed by priests and doctors on a volunteer basis. The priests will provide information about Church doctrine on moral aspects of family planning, while the doctors will counsel on medical aspects of the rhythm system.

Several other U.S. dioceses have established similar centers, including the Archdiocese of New York and San Francisco, and the Diocese of Buffalo, N.Y.

Couples will be referred to the center here by priests, doctors and social agencies of the diocese. Each interview will be conducted privately, and the center will probably be open two nights a week.

Bishop Kellenberg said the Catholic Church "has always endeavored to assist married couples who desire to fulfill the Christian obligation of responsible parenthood but who for valid reasons must consider the limitation of the number of children in their family."
