U.S. Bishops Long Opposed to Race Segregation Laws

Washington—(NC)—The defense of South Africa's enforced racial segregation by Archbishop William P. Whelan, O.M.I., of Bloemfontein is in sharp contrast to the teachings of the American hierarchy on racial segregation in three major statements.

The Southern African prelate spoke against a background of social conditions which differ considerably from those in the United States. But referring directly to the American scene, the U.S. bishops have stated flatly that the idea of forced segregation or apartheid violates essential elements of Christian justice.

IN A JOINT statement issued in 1953, the U.S. Bishops declared: "Legal segregation, or any form of compulsory segregation, in itself and by its very nature, imposes a stigma of inferiority upon the segregated people."

"Even if the now obsolete (U.S. Supreme) court doctrine of 'separate but equal' had been carried out to the fullest extent, so that all public and semipublic facilities were in fact equal, there is nonetheless the judgment that an entire race, by the sole fact of race and regardless of individual qualities, is not fit to associate on equal terms with members of another race."

"WE CANNOT reconcile such a judgment with the Christian view of man's nature and rights."

The U.S. bishops first spoke as a body on racism in 1943, near the height of racial tension in some industrial centers during World War II. Their most recent statement came in August, 1963, at the time of the dramatic August 28 March on Washington by hundreds of thousands of Negroes and whites.

Dozens of individual U.S. prelates (including Bishop Kearney of Rochester) have commented over the past two decades on the moral evil of racial discrimination and many Catholic agencies, such as Catholic Interracial Councils, are active in efforts to secure full rights for Negroes.

In their first statement in 1943, the Bishops concerned themselves with the reconstruction of U.S. society as the prospect of peace drew closer.

Funeral Rites Offered For Sr. William Edward

Geneva — Funeral service for Sister William Edward of the Order of Missionary Servants of the Blessed Trinity in Philadelphia, Pa., was held Tuesday at the Motherhouse in Philadelphia.

Sister William Edward is the former Eleanor Heffernan, daughter of Mrs. William C. Heffernan of 245 Main St., and the late William C. Heffernan. She died on Friday in Nazareth Hospital in Philadelphia after an extended illness. She has been a member of the Order of Missionary Servants of the Blessed Trinity for the past 27 years and celebrated her 25th anniversary in the order.

The order engages in Catholic charity work and members also act as instructors in the catechism in communities where there are no Catholic schools, and do census work. Survivors include her mother, Mrs. Heffernan; five brothers, Richard and Joseph of Geneva; Robert of Royal Oak, Mich.; Bernard of Rochester, and Alfred of Milwaukee, Wis., and one sister, Mrs. Mildred Fisher, of Geneva; and several nieces and nephews.

"THE WORLD'S INFORMATION AND KNOWLEDGE ARE NOW DOUBLING EVERY 10 YEARS AND SOON THEY WILL BE DOUBLING EVERY 5 YEARS"

YOUR COMPANY BELIEVES

IN THIS complex World today the pace is quickening and technological leg is tantamount to death. The gas and electric utilities have kept aware of their responsibilities and alert to their opportunities through active research and development programs. Energy requirements of the United States will triple by the year 2000. Gas and electric utilities, as suppliers of the most adaptable forms of energy, will play an increasingly important role in the economic growth of the Country. The past record of the investor-owned utilities has been excellent and their search for new ideas and better ways of doing the job insures that energy will be available to meet the growing demands of America's advancing economy.

The future also presents the utility industry with a formidable task—that of equaling or bettering its past record of reducing the cost of electricity and gas in the face of inflation and rising prices. This can be accomplished by improving or radically changing the techniques of production, generation, transmission and distribution. Advanced studies are already underway in all of these fields and significant progress is being reported.

Your Company believes that through vigorous research and development programs, in which utilities participate both as individual companies and collectively as an industry, the energy requirements of our Nation and the World will be met.

The significance of continued research and development goes far beyond the obvious benefits of improved processes, machines, materials, supplies and reduced costs. It is an expression of the freedom and incentive which exists in America. For it is in America that men have best been able to enjoy the rewards of their own inventiveness and where continued freedom and incentive will drive us to even greater achievements.

While our achievements are matters of great pride, we should not take them for granted. We can never forget that it was that lack of freedom that drove Einstein, Fermi, Teller and other great minds to our shores only a few decades ago. Today a primary concern of Great Britain is the daily exodus of top scientists and scholars to America where there is greater incentive and freedom to pursue their work. Even with the most benevolent motives a government which encroaches on the lives of its citizens through excessive taxation, controls, regulation or dictation will extinguish the flame of freedom and stop the flow of ideas which make for a better society.

Research and development can flourish only in a free society. It is the responsibility of this Nation to insure that the incentives, inherent in the free enterprise system, are not snuffed out and that individual initiative is preserved and encouraged.

HOW RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT AFFECT YOUR ELECTRIC AND GAS SERVICE

This is a page from a supplement to the Rochester Gas and Electric Annual Report to its shareholders. It describes the utility industry's research and development methods in the past and present, and its possibilities for the future. How such programs affect utility operation and service may be of interest to you. The supplement is yours for the asking along with a copy of RG&E's Annual Report.
