

Fly That Flag!

By MARY TINLEY DALY

It's a cheerful sight, that of the flag of the United States whipped by the breeze in front of house after house in cities and towns of America—cheerful and also significant.

Reminds us of a comment once made by Woodrow Wilson: "The flag is the embodiment, not of sentiment, but of history. It represents the experiences made by men and women, the experiences of those who do and live under that flag."

Now here we are, with Flag Day coming up again, 187 years since that June 14 when the first Continental Congress, meeting in Philadelphia, adopted the Stars and Stripes as the official flag of our country.

IT IS GOOD for children to learn at an early age the meaning of that flag, its symbolism as George Washington is said to have described it: "We take the stars from heaven, the red from our mother country, separating it by white stripes, thus showing that we have separated from her, and the white stripes shall go down to posterity representing liberty."

There is a feeling of pride and patriotism installed in even small children when father or mother hoists that banner briskly in the morning, lowers and ceremoniously at sundown and says, "We have the flag flying in front of our house!"

There are, of course, the designated days for flag-flying: for the rest of the year after Flag Day the following: Independence Day (July 4); Labor Day, first Monday in September; Constitution Day, Sept. 17; Columbus Day, Oct. 12; Navy Day, Oct. 27; Armistice Day, Nov. 11; Thanksgiving Day, fourth Thursday in November; and Christmas Day.

But there are also other celebration-days, family days such as birthdays, special anniversaries, arrival of a new baby, visit of a loved relative, when the flag-flying spirit may well find expression thus.

TIME WAS, not too long ago, when flags were quite expensive and it was quite a production to fly one—a pole had to be put in the ground and all the rest. Now, they can be bought in the supermarket and at almost any department store. With a holder that can be screwed onto a porch or an outside window sill, it is just a question of running it up. As to cost, the usual 3 x 5 cotton banner, with pole, ropes and standard runs about $4; moth-eaten stars come to about twice that amount, pole extra.

In recent years, many of the Nation's drycleaners, in cooperation with the American Legion, will dry-clean your flag free of charge between June 1 and 12, provided the owner promises to fly his flag on Flag Day.

Making flag-flying a part of the family tradition brings with it, of course, certain responsibilities. Symbol of the United States, it must be treated with the respect it deserves, so both parents and children should be aware of proper procedure in handling and displaying.

For instance, the flag should not be displayed on days when the weather is inclement; the flag should never touch anything beneath it, such as the ground, the floor, water, or merchandise. The flag should never be fastened, displayed, used, or stored in such a manner as will permit it to be easily torn, soiled, or damaged in any way. Finally, when the flag is in such condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, it should be destroyed in a dignified way, preferably by burning.

These "proper procedures" we have always found, delight children. They enjoy the responsibility of treating with respect something as meaningful as their country's flag. The little ones love to gather up the folds lovingly ("Mustn't ever let it touch the ground.")

Another intriguing, imagination-compelling role is the "dire distress" one: "The flag should never be displayed with the union down save as a signal of dire distress."

"If the house catches fire could we fly the flag upside down?" one of ours asked. We said yes, but advised that a more practical solution would be to call the Fire Department.

Some patriotic leaflets along this line, splendid for children (and their elders) are readily available. Examples: "The Flag Code"; "Our Flag" (beautiful color-illustrated booklet); "Our American Government"; "Facts About the United States"; etc. and many more.

These and lists of other titles may be secured by writing: Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402.

Evils of Pornography Stressed On TV Show

"Pages of Death," a film giving graphic illustration of the evil that can befall youth exposed to salacious literature prevalent on newsstands today will be shown on WOKR Channel 13, Tuesday, June 16 at 9:30 a.m.

Produced by the Third Order of St. Francis, the film narrated by Tom Harmon was planned to reach everyone with the horror of pornography and its evil effects.

The movie is said based on a true life story of an 11-year-old girl whose death resulted from a youth "obsessed with an over-stimulated sex drive fed by obscene literature."

Showing of the film on television is a project of the Family Campaign for Decent Literature, organized with the approval of Bishop Kearney and sponsored by Rochester Area Knights of Columbus.

Dear Loretta Young

'Crab' at Home

By MISS LORETTA YOUNG

"Crab" in the House

Dear Miss Young: Would you please print this in your column? I am in desperate need of your advice. This morning I discovered my 12-year-old son, who is a very nice boy, and I have to kiss his feet. He demands things of us while he relaxes every day of the week from the moment he steps into the house. So much has to be done around the house that it is slowly falling apart. My children and I are pleasant to him and all his ideas are crab-rotting ever pleases him. The children do their chores and I do much more than I already can take. I need your advice on who's duty it is to take care of repairs both in and out of the house. Also, why do men do this? Disgusted

Dear "Disgusted": There is a rather distasteful saying that goes "fish stinks from its head." If the head is bad, so goes the rest, and vice versa. Now, since the husband, by the natural law, is considered the "head of the home" (and the wife the heart), it is obviously the duty of said husband to take care of the head of the family. If he is selfish, lazy, demanding, his family will tend to be the same way. Children learn best through example, and unfortunately, sometimes, so do wives.

He must begin to realize that as the boss, he is setting the pattern, not only for himself but for his entire family. And God help him if he doesn't catch on in time to repair the standards of behavior for the family. If he is selfish, lazy, demanding, his family will tend to be the same way. Children learn best through example, and unfortunately, sometimes, so do wives.

It is a shame, too, because his home is supposed to be his castle and in great castle there is a good King. It is a shame that to his people, not a little too, "Long live a good King!"

Stay Home, Young Girl

Dear Miss Young: I would like to be able to get in movies someday. My trouble is this: I don't know how to get started. I'm fifteen and I want to go to New York as soon as I get the money and for certain reasons I can't wait until I'm older. I don't know what to do when I get there. Would you please answer these questions for me: Do I need an agent? If so, where do I get one? Do I have to have any special contacts? Do I have to be any certain age before I can act?

I'm willing to work as hard as is expected and I know that a lot of work is involved. Thank you very much for your time.

Star Struck

Dear "Star Struck": There is no right age to start acting. You do not have to go to New York to study. Start right at home. Join the drama class at your own school and if there isn't one available, start one. Take diction, dancing, singing, public speaking—anything
