My dear People:

Your generous response to my appeal last year for the Peter's Pence Collection for the Holy Father was the occasion of this very gracious response from His Holiness:

"Each year, you and your beloved flock of the Diocese of Rochester make your increasingly generous donation towards Peter's Pence, and the Holy Father has entrusted to me the privileged honour of acknowledging re-ceipt of your 1963 offering of fifty-

"His Holiness welcomes Your Excellency's liberal contribution with paternal joy, since it enables Him to continue and expand these important activities of His Pontificate, above all by bring aid, solace and consolation to those of His children who are suffering poverty, illness, deprivation and expulsion from their homes and country. On their behalf as well as His own, the Vicar of Christ sends you this assurance of appreciative and heartfelt gratitude, and He feels no that the beneficiaries of your charity will join their prayers to His, invoking upon the Dlocese of Roun-ester the benevolence of Heaven and the richest re-compensing graces of Almighty God."

I am sure everyone of us is concerned to preserve the reputation of our diocese for devotion and loyalty to the Holy See, so generously expressed each year at the close of June. May God bless you for your concern for the welfare of His Vicar upon earth.

Thanking you silicerely, I am

Your devoted Shep! and in Christ,

Bishop of Rochester

Courts Won't Rescue Us From Lethargy

The U.S. Supreme Court ended its term this week with its own judges unable to agree on why they came to their decisions.

Two of the top Court's ten decisions dealt with pornography in movies and paperback books.

In neither of these cases was there a majority opinion. A majority of the nine justices agreed, of course, on the overall result but not on the reasons why they arrived at that result,

Their differences at the summit of the nation's legal structure reject the nation's own confusion about the growing flood of obscenity and what can be

Experts far more competent in legal technicalities than are we will have to evaluate the Court's latest decisions on this topic but we do think the trend of both federal and state courts is clearly in the direction of unrestricted freedom to peddle pornography.

Efforts to plug the legal loopholes meet with scant popular support and existing laws entail lengthy court action when police seek to enforce them.

This, however, does not mean the situation is hope-

It simply points out with greater clarity that citizens have to measure up to the responsibilities of living in a free nation.

Freedom has its hazards as is evident when the smut traffic can boom into a multi-million dollar business. But freedom also carries with it the opportunity to buy and read libraries of the world's best literature for a pittance — there are certainly as many paperback classics as there are paperback cesspools.

And the same goes with movies. Let a theater schedule a first rate film and the management starves for customers but let an off-color one be listed and attendance swells while others howl in protest.

Americans ultimately get what they want. If enough Americans at the theater box offices and book stores indicate they want good movies and good books then we won't need to look to the courts for decisions. The courts have proved they won't rescue us from our own lethargy.

'Be Strong in Faith' Pope Tells Pilgrims

Vatican City - (NC) - Pope Paul VI urged the thousands of people at his regular weekly audience, June 10, to be strong in their faith despite the difficulties and uncertainties created by the non-believing mentality of modern times.

He said that while science studies are useful "to understand certain aspects of natural things, they do not tell us anything about other realities, about other fundamental truths which are reached through other methods of knowledge and thought,"

Those who possess faith, the Pontiff concluded, have a twofold responsibility toward it.

"We must exercise it, breathe it and profess it, at first inwardly, to accept its humility, experience its light, feel its sweetness and enjoy the energy with which it fills us.

"Secondly, we must express it outwardly in our words, feelings and conduct. The spirit of the faith must shape our whole life in simplicity and without

Fund Drive Flops in Paris, More Churches Needed

By Patrick Bliey

Paris — (NC) — The first attempt of the Church in France to rally the immense non-practicing Gatholle population around its church-building program has fallen far shiort of Maurice Cardinal Feltin of Paris tried to reach these non-churchgoing Catholics through a fullpage advertisement in eva fullpace advertisement in every daily newspaper in Paris. Four million copies were published. Only 2,000 people responded with contributions for the Cardinal's church-building project: one for every 2,000 newspapers sold.

"We barely covered the cost of the advertisment," was the rueful comment of Father Jean-Bernard Pallloncy, S.S., direc-tor of the Paris archdiocesan building center known as the "Chantlers du Cardinal" (the Cardinal's Construction Com-

This urgency may seem extravagant to the tourist in Parls, who finds a church on every third street and tends to think of Parls as a city of churches. And so it is—in the older quarters frequented by

But in the quarters that were built during the 10th century and in the sprayling industri-slized outskirts of the city, the picture is quite different.

"Some parishes in Paris number 70,000 people," Father Pail-lonoy said, "We haven't enough churches for our present popu-lation, and as for the future..."

Father Pailloncy pointed to a map of the archdiocese.

"The Archdiocese of Paris takes in the entire Department of the Seine, 15 miles from north to south and 15 miles from east to west. That includes the whole city of Paris, with three million people, and a large part of the suburbs, with another three million people.

"Within this territory, since the end of the war, the state has built apartments for more than half a million families. During the next 10 years it expects to build another half million such apartments.

"Our first step was to study the new quarters created by this vast program of construction, and determine what the religous needs of the people would be. As far as physical plant is concerned, we arrived at the figure of 142 new

Kodak Dividends In Heaven?

Kuwana, Japan-The open ing of a camera shutter here recently by a Maryknoll Missioner created an aperpure in a man's heart and soul to receive the gift of faith.

"It was a beautiful Sunday here at my mission on the Island of Honshu," Rev. Graham P. McDonnell, M.M. of Detroit, Mich., relates, "and after Mass, I had a visitation scheduled to a sick woman whose father was dying.

"Upon reaching the home, proceeded to minister to the sick woman. After I had completed my sick call, the woman's father woke up from his nap. Knowing his reluct-ance towards Baptism, I didn't bring up the subject, but instead I took some pictures. By this time the old man was quite intrigued by my camera and he asked me to take his picture before he died. While on the subject of death, I asked him if he had his 'ticket to Heaven.' When he said no, I said Baptism was it. Without any hesitation, the old man asked me to baptize him. "Although the film I shot was overexposed," Father McDonnell concluded, "the picture taking was successful, , as I did create a clear picture of Faith for a dying man,"

Until this year the Cardinal's Construction Company had appealed to the churchgoing population of Paris through sermons, A team of 14 pricate make the rounds of everychurch in Paris every year, preaching at all Sunday Masses. "I myself have repeated the same Jermon more than 1,200 times in the last five years," Father Pailloncy said.

"Last year the building program got about five million new france (about $1 million) through these abpeals from preachers. At this rate the churches we need by 1975 wouldn't get built until the year 2000."

Father Pallioney turned to another set of statistics.

"It was to reach this nonpracticing population that Cardinal Feltin, at my request, launched his appeal in the The advertisment ran April 23 According to Father Pallioncy, this was the first time that the Church in Franch had used this form of publicity, and the first time that the americal part of the Parisian Catholics has been informed of the Church's needs

"The response was very dis-appointing." Father Pallioning commented. "But perhaps by a question of conditioning pub-lic opinion, which is a gradual

'Painful Incident'-Priest Against Cardinal

Notre Dame—(RNS)—A national Catholic weekly here cautioned its readers against passing hasty judgement on the recent "painful incident" involved ving the dismissal of a priest from his administrative—but not priestly—duties by his Car-dinal-Archbishop.

Ave Maria, published by the Holy Ghost Fathers, recalled, without mentioning names, the action taken by James Francis Cardinal McIntyre, Archbishop of Los Angeles, in dismissing Father William H. DuBay, administrator at the predominantly Negro parish of St. Albert the Great in suburban Compton.

Father DuBay had publicly charged the prelate with failing to "exercise moral leadership among the Catholics of this diocese on racial discrimination and, in a letter to Pope Paul VI, had asked removal of the archbishop.

"Until the opposite can be proved, charity (and in most cases, wisdom);" the magazine declared in a lead editorial, "demands that we credit all parties in such an incident with sincerity of purpose and good-ness of intent. We might come to the judgement that a person is completely wrong in his policies and actions, but such a judgment does not, in itself, justify a conclusion of unworthy motives."

Ave Maria said the incident had caused "so much concern, discussion and confusion" among people devoted to the Church and its work, that "something must be said."

But, it slated, one difficulty in formulating a comment was that "we are dependent on secondary sources" in a serious situation that calls for "complete justice and accuracy." Another difficulty, it added, was the "complexity" of the situa-tion itself.

The magazine said that prudential judgment is involved in dealing with such a social, moral problem (as racism), and this meant that "in most comes good men who recognize the same moral principles can and will differ in their judgment on the application of these principles to the concrete circumstan-

Noting that the Church has branded racism as a moral evil in "unmistakable, terms," Ave Maria said "many bishops have felt it necessary or wise to implement this teaching by state-ments and action on the local level.

But it added that "like everyone else, a bishop is obliged to exercise his responsibility prudently, with the best advice and thought available," and "in the final analysis . . . no one else can make his decisions for him."

Declaring that it was here speaking in specifics, Ave Maria said that "concern for the common good demands that the benefit of the deubt he given to religious authority, since "public defiance of the person who holds spiritual authority does violence to society."

"Nevertheless," It observed, "It has always been the clear teaching of the Church that the holder of spiritual authority is not thereby preserved from er-ror or fault. For most men in high position the burden of their personal frailty is their most bitter agony."

On the other hand, Ave Maria said, "we must recognite a difference between the personal and public rejection of apiritual authority. An individual might feel obliged to notify a superior. that he cannot in conscience perform a particular act. He must have a much more serious reason to justify a public sa-fisnes of authority."

The magazine concluded by the most charitable conclusion available to most of us in the judgment that all of the per-sons involved need our prayers for the grace to retain charify, understanding and courage in living up to their own rasponsa-bilities. Perhaps other publish lions will feel free to arrive at more definitive conclusion At this time, we do not.".

J.S. Catholics Snub Top African Students

13, 1231 at the age of 36,

By GARY MACEOIN

Calabar on the steaming west coast of Africa is as thriving a Catholic mission as any I visited during a three month journey that brought me to fifteen countries of that vast continent. Schools under Catholic management play a major part in the region's education system. Catholic bospitals are outstanding. As in all Nigeria, the proportion of catechumens to Catholics is high promising a continuation of the Church's Bishop Moynagh of Calabar has long been particularly concerned with preparing Catholics to play their part in the develop-ment of the newly independent state, the most populous in all of Africa. He has put a lot of money into a printing plant in which he produces a magazine of information and opinion, one of the country's two Catholic publications for general readership.

He also does everything in his power to help outstanding students to pursue higher studies in European and American

Just a few days before I met him he had received an extremely distressing letter. It was a report from a group of students whom he had recently placed in the United Sintes. They had to travel a considerable distance to Sunday Mass, they said. And when they reached the church, the reception from the white congregation was chill-

When one of them entered a seat, the occupants moved to another. They ware shunned as they left the church, leither people nor priest exchanging a single word with them. It was, they wrote, quite clear to them that they simply were not wanted.

"Can nothing be done," the bishop asked me, "to get American Catholics to understand the effect of such thoughtless bad manners. These are cultured young men. On their return home, they will be campule ed into top positions in education, business and government. They went to America with a sense of gratitude both to the Catholic Church and your country for helping them get up in the world. They will come back full of bitterness and disillusionment, convinced by their ewn experience that all our professions of opposition to tasism are by-

Patron of Portugal

The Detective Saint, St. Anthony of Padus, a native of Portugal, left the Augustinian Canona Regular in order to become a Franciscan Friar Minor. He is one of the most popular saints of the Church, with a reput-tation for finding the lost belongings of careless people, and he has always been famous as "the wonder-worker." He preached and thught in France as well as in I(aly, and we are told that men closed their workshops and offices to go and hear him. Because of his singular knowledge of the bible, he was called "the Ark of the Testament." He was declared a Doctor of the Church in 1946 by Pope Plus XII. He died on June

That the experience deployed by Bishop Moynagh is no isolated one is known to all who have been involved in working for foreign students in the United States or who have come in touch with them through Catholic international organizations,

But most American Cathelles are un-concerned, and as long at they are, the work of our missionaries is going to be undone, and the enjectives of our matienal foreign policy are going to be sabetaged— not by Communist complicators, but by neople who boast they are dedicated Cathe-lies and loyal Americans.

Bishop Moynagh's problem cannot be solved in isolation, since it is merely one aspect of the entire complex of race relations in the United States. How vexing this is for American Catholics is well illustrated by a newly published symposium entitled "Black, White and Gray" edited by Texasborn Bradford Daniel. Particularly to the point is a contribution by a Negre priest Pather August Thompson, on attitudes at white Catholics.

"They just don't what us," he writeh 'In some places our young people cannot attend camps. Too often we cannot join church societies. Yes, it is true that we could form our own little segregated Negro versions of these same societies, but you loss the whole spirit—the very Catholicity—of it when you do that, ... Do you know that I see a priest, have never attended a Cana Conference? Do you know that white non-Catholics are welcomed into Catholic churches and can attend church functions where I, as a Negro priest would not be parmitted"

Here are the true dimensions of the problem. And while it remains in these national terms, we Cathelles at home will continue to be actively engaged in negative ing the effects of Bishep Moynigh and his thousands of fellow missionaries in Africa and Ails.
