MOTHER MARY BRIDE, left, Mother General of the Sisters of Mercy, and Sister Mary de Pazzi, dean of Catherine McAuley College, were at the airport to greet Sister Theresa Mary and Sister Mary Attracta when they arrived from India. Two other nuns from India, Sister Mary Edith and Sister Mary Selka, also were on hand to greet them.

Rochester Like London

Indian Sisters Arrive

"Rochester is like London, York!" Such was the initial reaction of two young sisters from South India as they emerged from their plane into a foggy downpour at Rochester airport Thursday, Aug. 20. Their only orientation about Rochester weather, indeed about Rochester, was from another native of India who had visited here: the single comment was that Rochester is cold, bring shoes.

On hand to greet the sisters were the Mother General of the Sisters of Mercy, Mother Mary Bride, Sister Mary de Pazzi, dean of Catherine McAuley College, two carloads of Sisters of Mercy, and two other young sisters from India who have been studying at Catherine McAuley

College for the past two years, Sister Edith and Sister Selka. THE FOUR Indian sisters, all of whom are in their early twenties, entered the convent in their native South India, but have not as yet taken their final vows of religious profession. They are spending four years in Rochester being trained in American scholarship and spirituality by the Rochester Sisters of Mercy at Catherine McAuley College. They were carefully screened for their scholarship by a board of priests and sisters as part of the Overseas Education Program of the Sisters of Mercy.

The new arrivals are Sister Theresa Mary (Ellicott) of the Franciscan Clarist Congregation, Changanacherry Motherhouse, Kerala, and Sister Mary Attracta (Furtado) of the Sisters of the Little Flower of Bethany, Bethany Convent, Magalore, South Kanara, India. They flew from India Wednesday together with other Indian sisters bound for various colleges conducted by Sisters of Mercy across the country.

Of Sister Edith and Sister Selka, who are beginning their third year at Catherine McAuley College, Sister Mary de Pazzi, dean of studies commented, "Their fluency in English has increased remarkably and they have been outstanding both for their avid desire to learn and for their adaptability in becoming a much-loved part of the Mercy family."
