Dear Loretta Young

Tell The Truth

By MRS LORETTA YOUNG

Dear Loretta:

I am troubled with this problem. This girl is writing to me and there is no way I can stop her. No matter how I discourage her she won't stop writing because she doesn't take me seriously. Incidently, I (and my friends share my opinion) don't think much of her. Now she has even asked me to escort her to a dance. I don't quite know what to do. I don't want to take her but I don't want to be rude to her. Would simply refusing by saying I can't make it in time be rude? Could I also have a few of your views on this subject too? Thank you.

TORMENTED

Dear TORMENTED:

There are many ways of refusing an invitation without being rude or telling a lie. This is an all too easy habit to fall into; that is, to tell a lie, in order not to hurt someone's feelings.

"Charity" we call it when in fact it is "pride" in its most devious and deceptive form. Under the guise of charity, we are actually establishing the disasterous habit of choosing to hurt God, rather than to hurt one of His creatures. "Oh, God understands," we say. Yes, He does understand. He understands that we love man's approval more than we do His. So please, do be careful of this sly use of the devil: It's only a little white lie; it harms no one. Theologians agree that a lie is intrinsically evil in itself, regardless of its degree, because it is an offense against truth. Try this as an answer: I'm sorry. I will not be able to accept your invitation because of a previous commitment. (Even if the commitment is to stay at home and read or watch TV). Or, I'm sorry I have made other plans for that evening. You have! You have planned not to take her to the dance. Not rude. Not a lie. It's the truth. But it's the truth spoken with consideration for the other person's feelings. Someone once said: A true gentleman is never rude, unintentionally.

Small Reception

Dear Loretta:

We find it necessary to trim a long wedding reception. How can we not invite children without hurting their parents? We want to make this as easy as possible for my parents yet include relatives — without children.

HOPEFUL

Dear HOPEFUL:

One solution which is acceptable under the circumstances is to invite all to the wedding ceremony at the church and only the immediate family and wedding party to the reception afterward. Most people understand and appreciate how expensive a wedding is and are more than willing to co-operate.

They are hurt only when they think they have been ignored or forgotten.

Yes, Yes, Yes

Dear Loretta:

There are a group of girls in our school who like the Beatles. The problem is our teacher. Whenever one of us gets a low grade, she threatens to phone our mothers. She did call one girl's mother and told her the trouble was because of the Beatles. Before the Beatles, we sometimes made low grades and no comment was made. Is this fair? What can we do about this?

A BEATLE FAN

Dear FAN:

I don't blame you for liking "the Beatles." They are clean, dressed properly, and have a good solid, modern sound to their music. Can't you girls manage to enjoy the Beatles after your homework is finished? All work and no play is not good for anyone, nor is all play and no work. Even if not dear, and then all will be fair . . . and fun.

(Miss Young welcomes letters and problems for answer in this column. Write to her, in care of A/M Publication Services, 41 East 41st St., New York 17, N.Y.)

Movie's 'Michelangelo' Visits Pieta

Michelangelo's priceless sculpture, Pieta, is viewed at the New York World's Fair Vatican Pavilion by Charlton Heston, who portrays the famous artist in a film based on his life. Now nearing completion on location in Rome and Florence, the movie is called "The Agony and the Ecstasy." It is being produced by 20th Century-Fox. Shown with Heston are his son, Fraser, and Msgr. John J. Germain, director of the Vatican Pavilion. (RNS Photo)

Disc Notes

German Student Songs

by PAUL CONTESTABLE

Goodfellowship that is so evident when German students get together has been captured in a new Phillips release called A Treasury of German Student Songs. The various choruses that lend their voices to this LP, should appeal not only to the German speaking music buying public, but to all music lovers.

And for those of us who do not speak German, the album contains the lyrics of all 14 songs in German with an English translation. What more could we ask but to be over in Germany with these students and their homespun camaraderie.

I have to admit that there is only one song on the entire album that I have ever heard before—the stirring Gaudeamus Igitur from The Student Prince. Though that has always been one of my favorites, many of the other songs on the album far outshine this work. One of the best is Krambambuli, a zestful fun song. You'll want to sing along with this one—and with the lyrics included, you can.

Humor from Mother Goose to Madame Nhu is one byword in Mems Mabley's latest Mercury release, Moms the Word. Her delivery in both song and dialogue is topnotch. Her parodies are hilarious. For a laugh or a smile, remember, Moms the Word.

Herman Chebanoff, known as "The Master of Mood Music," offers an unsual and pleasing arrangement of the best songs of today in his Mercury release, Teen Hits Played the Chebanoff Way. His styling has ranged from Beethoven to the Beatles and beyond. He has done deep classics and the wildest pops—all skillfully and brilliantly presented.

This album ranges from his interpretation of the Beatles' P.S. I Love You to Barbara Streisand's People. After listening to them, you'll wonder if all the tunes in this LP weren't originally intended for the Chebanoff arrangements.

The talent of Carmen Cavallaro remains irresistible year after year, and in a new Decca release, the popular piano maestro presents an outstanding collection of 12 of the best melodies from Japan.

Highlighted by the popular Sukiyaki, Cherry Blossom Time offers pleasing background music for any occasion.

Italian Songs Everybody Knows by Guy Lombardo and His Royal Canadians features the mandolin and guitar transmitting the color and beauty of sunny Italy. The Decca release is sure to be a favorite of music lovers.

Included in the album are Non Dimenticar, Anema E Core, Volare, Arrivederci Roma, Tarantollo and Finicull, Finicula.
