

A Day in the Life of a Student Nurse

When day is done it's time for review of the day's lectures and bringing notes up to date. Theresa is then ready for a good night's rest.

A day in the life of a student nurse is filled with a varied and well-balanced program of classroom lectures, hospital duty, caring for the needs of the sick, social activities and study. Such a routine is maintained by Theresa Hillich, a senior at St. Joseph's Hospital School of Nursing in Elmira, who will graduate next September following a three year course.

Theresa, very personable, soft spoken and dedicated to a course of study that will bring her to a career as a registered Nurse, ordinarily rises at 6 o'clock each morning and proceeds to the Pediatric Unit of the Hospital to assist the little patients physically and psychologically, helping them with their meals and in general bringing comfort to the children often away from home for the first time.

Theresa then attends lectures in a classroom with 9 other students of the 36 seniors who are currently studying child care. Three hours of each day are spent at these lectures.

Following a short luncheon break, Theresa returns to Pediatric to again assist in feeding the children, then on in additional lectures until 4 p.m.

Theresa then finds time to relax with her classmates in social activities or to spend her time as she chooses until time for dinner.

A quiet hour is observed by the students from 8:30 to 9 in the evening, affording them an opportunity for review of their classroom lectures, research in a well-filled school library or for correspondence with relatives or friends.

Throughout each year proper emphasis is placed on the need of group recreation for the students. School parties, dances, movies, athletic events, area Student Nursing Association meetings and musical get-togethers are all part of the activities program designed to help make each student a well-adjusted member of society upon graduation.

The Nurses residence in Elmira, known as the Edward J. Deane Memorial, is an outstanding home for the student, with every facility for the student's convenience and social life of the residents.

A well appointed lounge with piano and television, a guest lounge and an auditorium with full stage is available for all programs sponsored by the group.

Theresa spends a maximum of forty hours each week as a student nurse. This includes class time and practice in the clinical area.

Each student enjoys the benefit of two full days free time every week, frequently used to make overnight trips to their homes in Elmira or elsewhere.

At the present time there are 131 students in the School of Nursing, including five Sisters of St. Joseph, comprising 64 freshmen, 31 juniors and 36 seniors. The 64 freshmen represent the largest class in the 56 year history of the school that opened in October of 1908.

The school is staffed by three priests, Father Phillip E. McGowan, Hospital Chaplain, Father John J. Leary and Father Michael C. Hogan. They instruct the students in religion, ethics and a course of marriage and the family.

Also on the faculty are five Sisters of St. Joseph, eleven lay instructors, a full time librarian and two secretaries.

A full time health counselor and a school physician are available to care for the needs of the students.

Theresa is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Hillich, 2225 English Road, Rochester. She is a graduate of St. John the Evangelist school and Nazareth Academy and with her family is a member of St. Lawrence parish in Rochester.

Despite the exacting duties as a student nurse, Theresa finds time to serve as secretary of Area 11, Student Nurses Association of New York State; she is also a member of the Sodality of Our Lady at the Hospital, is piano accompanist for school music classes and has held other class offices.

Theresa told of her plans following graduation that include working at her profession and attending evening classes to attain her objective, a Bachelor of Science degree in Nursing.

St. Joseph's School of Nursing is directed by Sister Marie Michael and Sister M. Juliana is assistant director of nursing education.

LANCASTER HOMES

THANK YOU, MRS. STOCKAR

Mrs. Paul Stockar* is living in her FOURTH LANCASTER HOME—because LANCASTER wins her first choice every time she shops.

Mrs. Stockar bought her first LANCASTER home in 1950. She shopped for it carefully, knowing that a home is the largest single purchase most families make. She learned that "the LANCASTER people care as much about ownership satisfaction as they do about sales," and she learned that her first house was "a wise investment." When she was in the market for a second home, she shopped just as carefully again. "I was pleased, as I am again now, that LANCASTER still came out best in every home comparison I could make," Mrs. Stockar says. "In fact, LANCASTER homes get better all the time — more spots, more convenience features. And wherever I want to live it seems there is a LANCASTER house available in an ideal location."

*Monten Drive, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Whether you need a first home, a second, or a fourth, you can depend on LANCASTER to give you the best house for your money.
