

Mountain Style Mass Music

Franklin, N.C.—(NC)—Instead of an entrance hymn at the beginning of the new "Mountain Mass" there's a "walking-in song," composed by Father John Barry of the Glenmary Home Missioners.

Soon to be published by the World Library of Sacred Music, Cincinnati, the Mass closes with a "walking-out song."

These are "Tarheel" expressions, said Father Barry, pastor of St. Francis of Assisi church here. His Appalachian mountaineer parishioners have a tradition of ballads and a tremendous love for God," he said.

Lyrics for the Mass were written by one of the parishioners, Mrs. Mel Wittkind, convert, college graduate, and mother of six.

Father Barry said the songs have a "mountain lilt" except for the Communion song, which has a plaintive character. Like the strain of nostalgia in mountain ballads, it is supposed to express the communicant's homesickness for heaven.

Geneva CDA Hears Sister on Vocations

Geneva — Court, Annunciation, No. 416, Catholic Daughters of America, had a vocational program recently in St. Stephen's School hall.

Sister Ann Mary of the St. Joseph Motherhouse in Rochester, spoke to the members on vocations: the single, married, and religious.

"No matter which one is called to, one should do one's best to love and serve God," she said.

Continuing, Sister said the source of vocations is in the home, and the family is a "mirror" in determining one's vocation. In the religious state there is no special type. Each one gives of one's unique self. She keeps that uniqueness and individuality and personality in giving.

Sister quoted "It is in giving that we receive. And what do give a life of prayer, of study, those in religion give? They and of work."

"And what do those in religious life receive? They receive a life of simple pleasures," she said, "of challenge and of warm satisfaction."

Sister Ann Mary pointed out that a vocation is a call from God and if we hear Him we will choose the right one.

The Sisters of St. Stephen's parish were the court's guests for the occasion.

The court voted on paying dues to the Rochester Diocesan Council of Catholic Women.

Mrs. Doeblin thanked all who helped in the recent successful card party. Proceeds from the party will go to the Seminary fund.

Lecturer Mary Jane Cocco announced that on Mar. 24 the court will have a Holy Hour at 8 p.m. in St. Stephen's Church.

Mrs. Doeblin also announced that she will call a special meeting following the Holy Hour to elect a nominating committee. Next business meeting will be Apr. 28 when the nominating committee will give their report.

46 Socialists Drown in India

Sambalpur—(NC)—Forty-six socialist members met death by drowning when the ferry boat taking them to an annual sodality service capsized and sank.

The accident happened in an artificial lake beyond a dam built in the Sanki river to supply water for the steel city of Rourkela. There were about 100 persons on the ferry, and 52 boys and girls saved themselves by swimming to tree stumps protruding near the shore.

The group was heading for Kesaram, where Orissa state's yearly sodality rally has been held since 1908. Thousands of Catholics from the villages of the district of East India were already walking in a candlelight procession in honor of Our Lady of Fatima when the tragedy occurred. When word of the sinking reached Kesaram, three Divine Word missionaries immediately set out to aid in the search for the bodies.

Parents Briefed On Religious Course

Last Sunday evening, Mar. 14, more than one hundred parents of McQuaid students and religious from area Catholic schools attended the second of a series of lectures being given at the Jesuit High School on each Sunday of Lent.

The purpose of the lectures is to familiarize parents with the new four year course in Catechists being given at the school. The first lecture—an overall view of the content and objective of the entire course—was given by Rev. Joseph A. Novak, S.J. of New York City, who is one of the authors of the new religion series.

On subsequent Sundays Jesuit members of the school's religion department are giving more detailed explanation of the subject matter and specific goals of each year.

A discussion and question period follows each talk. At 8:15, Sunday evening, Mar. 21, Father Paul Duggan, will outline the work of second year.
