Catholic University In England
 Heythrop — (RNS) — Set in motion this year will be a major revolution in Roman Catholic educational policy that will in many ways be the beginning of a Catholic university in Britain, a long-cherished Catholic dream.
 Climaxing prolonged negotiations with the Vatican was the decision of the Jesuit-conducted College of St. Robert Bellarmine here to open its doors to all students — no longer restricting enrollment to candidates for the priesthood.
 This means that Heythrop College will develop into a major seat of Catholic learning, giving degrees not only to Jesuit students but to all other students, and will present professors and lecturers representing many traditions in the Church.
 Already many non-Jesuits are in residence at Heythrop in the new halls of a residence built on the extensive estate some 15 miles from Oxford owned by the Society of Jesus.
 The changes at Heythrop have had the full support of John Cardinal Hoenen, Archbishop of Westminster, who is to become the first chancellor as Heythrop broadens its contacts and widens the academic possibilities of Catholic students.
 Until now, there has been no large Catholic educational foundation in Britain with the resources and staff necessary for full university status. Under the new plan, the Heythrop library will be open to all students and will have working arrangements with the University of Oxford.

Bishop Spurs Racial Projects
 Projects for inter-racial justice were blessed by Bishop Kearney at a Mass at Immaculate Conception Church Sunday morning.
 Attended by scores of local inter-racial leaders, the Mass was arranged by the Rochester Catholic Interracial Council.
 The Bishop read excerpts from a letter from the Sisters of St. Joseph of this Diocese who staff Good Samaritan Hospital in Selma, Alabama, a mission they began in 1940.
 In this letter, the nuns detailed the plight of Negroes long denied basic human rights.
 Awarded plaques for their personal involvement in the human rights struggle locally were Rochesterian Mrs. Mildred Quamina, a teacher, and one of the founders of the Mother Cabrini Circle, and Connecticut-born Miss Isabelle Dolan, founder of Loreto House on Hand St., Rochester.
 The awards, named for the late Mrs. Harriet Schuyler, a

Workers' Unit in Red District
 Rome — (NC) — Birthday presents to Pope Pius XII have built an eight-story center for young workers on the fringe of one of Rome's most populous and heavily communist districts.
 The funds had been sent by bishops and friends to the late pope to mark his 80th birthday. Pope Pius died before he decided what should be done with them. His successor, Pope John XXIII, decided they should be used for the young workers' center and, through Archbishop Angelo Dell'Acqua, substitute papal secretary of state, the secular institute Opus Dei was asked to undertake its building and operation.
 "There are about 300,000 people in the Tiburtina district," said Piergiorgio Falla, vice director of the new center. "Most of them, when they vote at least, are communists."
 And it is for that reason that the new center stands where it does. For one of Rome's major problems is how to keep contact with the enormous mushrooming districts that are building up around the older parts of Rome. Thirty years ago Rome was a city of about 800,000 people. Today it counts more than 2,000,000 inhabitants.
 The diocese of Rome is faced with a tremendous problem of trying to keep up with the city's growth. Thus the center, which will have a parish church attached, answers a great need.

Prayer with Anglicans
Vatican Prelate Visits Coventry
 Coventry — (RNS) — A Catholic Archbishop and an Anglican Bishop knelt together in prayer in Coventry's Anglican Cathedral in an act of worship believed unprecedented in this country.
 The two central figures in this new chapter of ecumenical history were the Apostolic Delegate to Britain, Archbishop Igino Cardinal, and the Anglican Bishop of Coventry, Dr. Cuthbert Bardsley.
 The occasion was an official visit to Coventry Cathedral by Archbishop Cardinal, who said it was the result of an approach by a personal friend in Rome.
 Archbishop Cardinal's visit occurred while the 48 deans of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States were holding their annual conference in the Cathedral. The Catholic prelate said he would like to pray in the Cathedral chapel next to the Bishop Bardsley and meet him there.
 The party said the Lord's Prayer in English and the Veni Creator was said simultaneously in Latin and English.
 Later the Provost of Coventry Cathedral, the Very Rev. H. C. M. Williams, said: "Archbishop Cardinal's visit has a significance greater than we yet pioneer in inter-racial work in Rochester, were made at a breakfast at the Manger Hotel following the Bishop's Mass.

 A CHICAGO priest, Father Martin Farrell, pastor of Holy Cross Church in the almost totally Negro Woodlawn area of that city, was speaker at the breakfast.
 He strongly endorsed the Industrial Areas Foundation headed by Saul Alinsky who was recently invited to aid in organizing the Negro community in Rochester.
 Father Farrell said the Foundation's program is "very American, very Christian." He repeated "usually nothing other than Negro removal." He said Negroes will achieve their rights only if they win them by themselves — "they won't get them from white people, we have a 100 years' proof of that."
 The Chicago priest cited papal directives calling Catholics to a leadership role in striving for human rights but admitted the "general response has been 'too little too late.'"
 More than 500 attended the breakfast.

Episcopalian Rite Praised
 Pope Paul told Episcopal Bishop Anson Phelps Stokes at the Vatican this week he was personally grateful for a memorial rite held at Boston's Episcopal Cathedral for the late Pope John in 1963.
 Cardinal Cushing appointed a Chancery official to be his representative at the service.
 Pope Paul also told Bishop Stokes he endorsed the ecumenical projects launched by Cardinal Cushing and the Episcopal prelate.
