Auxiliary Begins Fifth Year

St. Ann's Auxiliary is beginning its fifth year with the installation of its new officers. It is an organization open to all women of the diocese who can spend some time each month at St. Ann's Home.

There are at present two large evening programs each month and one afternoon event each week at which the auxiliary helps to entertain the residents. The evening programs are a musicale on the first Tuesday of each month which usually includes dancing with the residents and a large variety of entertainments followed by homemade desserts on the second Thursday evening of each month.

These programs include movies, music, a fashion show, Christmas party, a general "Happy Birthday" party for all the residents and a big St. Patrick's party.

The weekly programs include visiting and entertaining people in the lounge and throughout the home.

St. Ann's Auxiliary has a number of associate members who are not able to be active at the home but who assist at their own homes by baking for parties or donating gifts.

Celebrate Mass In Factories

Cardiff, Wales — (NC)—Mass should be celebrated in factories, offices, shops and homes rather than in churches, Father Herbert McCabe, O.P., told architecture students here. He said he was emphasizing that the Mass belongs where people naturally gather, rather than in special places set apart from normal life.

Jesuit, Prelate Differ On Birth Control Issue

Bombay — (RNS) — Arch-bishop Thomas Roberts, S.J., of London, former Archbishop of Bombay, has been criticized by a fellow Jesuit for stating in a secular newspaper here that the laws against contraception are still causing many Catholics to leave the Church.

Observers said it was the first instance in India of a priest and a prelate of the same order engaging in an open controversy in the columns of a secular daily.

The archbishop's critic was Father Anthony D'Costa, S.J., who declared in a letter to Indian Express that the prelate's conclusion was "perhaps too hasty."

Wrote the priest: "There is no way of testing the accuracy of the Church's teaching."

"At the very origin of Christianity we read that some found its teaching hard and dissociated themselves from the Church. If the same happens today, there is nothing sensational about it."

Father D'Costa's letter replied to an interview in the same newspaper in which Archbishop Roberts said: "The matter of contraception is not an absolutely closed question and something must be left to the conscience of the individual."

We start with nature's choice whole grains... never any extracts. We go halfway around the world to get special hops for lighter, cleaner flavor. That way we always know exactly what's going into our beer.

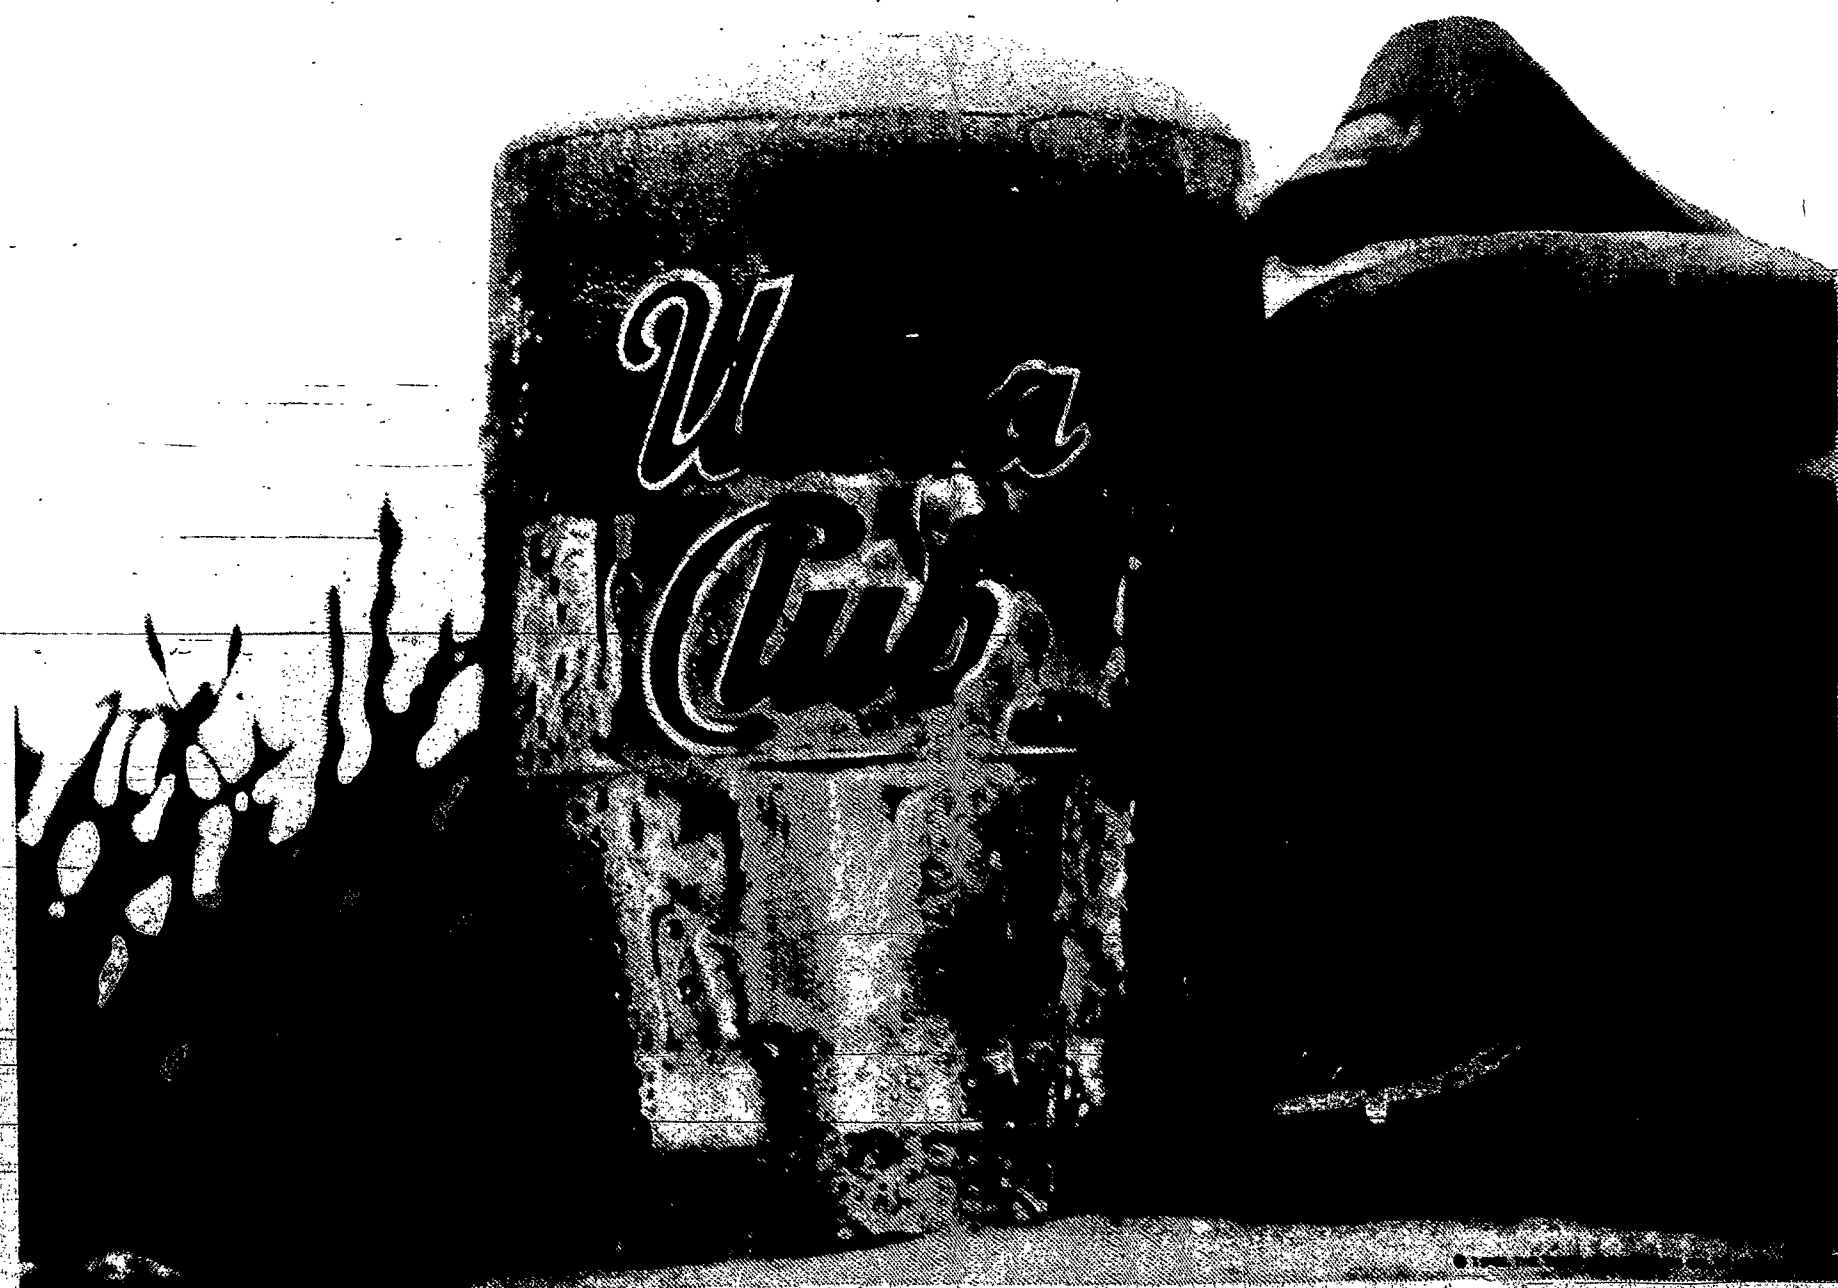

We let the beer make its own natural carbonation. It gives the beer its fine creamy head. Ulica Club is one of the few beers left in the country that is still made this way.

We still add rice for lightness. It costs more, but we feel it's the only way you can make beer truly light without taking out the flavor.

We still take the time to age Ulica Club naturally. It takes 3 or 4 times longer; but this extra aging gives Ulica Club the smoother, more mellow taste you like in the beer you drink.

We still let nature make the beer because that's the way you like it.
