

Swedes Mark Faith Jubilee

By RUNE F. THURINGER
Stockholm — (NC) — Swedish Catholics took to boats to attend Mass on the island where St. Ansgar first celebrated Mass on Swedish soil, as part of the commemoration of the 11th centenary of the French-born missionary's death.

It was in the commercial center of Birka on the island of Bjorkoe in Lake Malar that the Benedictine monk from Corbie in the diocese of Amiens in France for the first time preached the Gospel to the Swedes, during his visits in 830 and 852.

A solemn Mass in the open air was celebrated by Abbot Oswald Eaves, O.S.B., of Karlstad, who in his sermon pointed to Ansgar's determination to persevere in a very hard and as it seemed fruitless work. St. Ansgar planted the seed, others, like St. Sigfrid from England, later on had the joy to see it grow up, the abbot said. The Mass was celebrated on the same spot on which Ansgar had offered the Holy Eucharist.

The Lutheran State Church had its jubilee outing a week earlier and also had to use boats to come over to Bjorkoe. King Gustavus VI Adolfus took part in the whole day's program. Lutheran Archbishop Gunnar Hallgren of Uppsala officiated at a festival service, held at a chapel erected in 1930.

The Ansgar jubilee has been widely observed by the Swedish press and radio. On May 22 the daily conservative Svenska Dagbladet had a feature article: "Who was Ansgar?" by the well-known Catholic writer and historian Alf Aberg. The post office department has a special postmark with a picture of St. Ansgar and his archepiscopal cross, as well as a special series of stamps.

The Royal Museum of Antiquities has opened an exhibition, called "Ansgar's Birka — a commercial center from the time of the Vikings." Here some unique finds are shown from the richest archeological site in Scandinavia, with 2500 graves.

This exhibition among other things illustrates the position of Birka as an important transit harbor for the commerce between east and west in the ninth century. Here traders from the whole world met. Pounds of Arabian silver coins have been dug up from Birka's famous "black soil."

In this cosmopolitan milieu and with the tolerant king Bjoern as his protector, Ansgar and his assistants were able to preach the gospel about "White Christ." In a short time they baptized the captain Hergeir, who built the first church on his estate.
