Nuns on Campus

Boulder, Colo. — (NC) — The chaplain of the National Newman Apostolate predicted here that there will be an "explosion" of nuns engaged in Newman work on secular campuses.

"Vatican Council II will provide the impetus for this new force in the Newman apostolate," declared Msgr. John Bradley. He noted that at present there are only 10 nuns engaged fulltime in Newman work.

Msgr. Bradley stressed in an interview that through the Newman apostolate nuns can influence a far larger number of Catholic students than would otherwise be the case.

"For example," he said, "a group of 30 nuns might staff a Catholic college with 600 students. If two of those nuns were to leave that campus for a secular one, they would be in contact with far more students than those back on their original campus."

Msgr. Bradley, Newman chaplain at the University of Michigan, was among a group of 41 chaplains and six nuns at a Newman chaplains' training school on the University of Colorado campus.

Two Sisters of St. Francis from Omaha — Sister Mary Conleth and Sister Mary Violenne — are taking part in a pilot project at the University of Colorado for work by nuns in the Newman field.

They have been at the university since last fall, helping the Newman chaplain, Father Charles Forsyth, O.S.B., conduct programs for more than 2,000 Catholic students. They also carry on a Confraternity of Christian Doctrine program for the children of married students and run a Newman library.

"The first job of the nun on campus," said Sister Mary Conleth, "is the same as the first job of the Christian in the world: to be happy and make others happy."

"If we do nothing else but make it obvious that we have chosen to belong to God, that it is no sterile choice and that we are hilariously happy in it, we have accomplished more than enough."

FINAL PLANS for the Annual Chicken Barbecue to be held at St. Joseph's Church, Rush on Saturday, July 31, are made by Jack Gaffney, president of the Holy Name Society; Mrs. Joseph Hoh, chairman; Mrs. William Fratter, Mrs. Gene Kilek and Mrs. George Popp, assistants to the chairman.

Ultra-Conservatives Said Rooted in Individualism

Pittsburgh — (RNS) — A member of the editorial board of the New York Times declared here that he does "not understand how Catholics can be active in the John Birch Society, the Young Americans for Freedom, the so-called Conservative Party in New York."

William V. Shannon said these and "other pseudo-conservative organizations... preach unlimited individualism, ruthless competition, a me-first-and-the-devil-take-the-hindmost attitude on economic and social questions, and regard the states as an enemy."

Speaking at commencement at Mount Mercy College, Mr. Shannon dismissed "these ideas as the intellectual baggage of the 19th Century social Darwinism."

"Catholics, above all other people," he said, "should realize that politics is not just a clash of private interests; it is a search for justice. Since man is a social being and naturally a member of a human community, the state which protects the common interests of the community cannot be an enemy."

clared that he had "always been astonished and depressed at the automatic conservatism of so many Catholic college graduates on public issues."

"It was as if they thought that having learned the truths of their religion, they also knew all the answers about public questions. They had a built-in bias against change and innovation."

Recalling Mark Twain's phrase — "the calm Christian confidence of a man holding four aces" — Mr. Shannon said that Christians today "should think of ourselves as having only three aces and always looking for the fourth."

He explained: "There are real enemies to moral truth and freedom in the world, but we all have more to give than to fear; there are great treasures in Catholic theology, philosophy and intellectual tradition, but we all have more to learn than to conserve."
