Thru The Looking Glass Over My Shoulder

By LOUISE WILSON

Louise Wilson is heard eleven times weekly on Station WHAM, 9:10 and 9:25 A.M. Monday through Friday, 9:30 A.M. Saturday.

Looking back a few weeks to the time I spent in New York City, some of my brightest memories included:

A VISIT TO THE HOUSE OF REVLON: a once-in-a-lifetime experience, so far, visiting a Fifth Avenue salon, walking into the hushed atmosphere of this temple dedicated to beauty. Sitting in the same chair as the famous and near famous who have their hair done by one of the world's greatest stylists. Mr. Fred, no sad, soulful face. Rather, a peppy, happy young man with special good looks and outgoing personality.

As Mr. Fred works with unusual dexterity and creative ability, he discusses everything from his former life in Germany to his present one here in America with his lovely wife (formerly with Sason) and his brand new son. He chats, he hums, he almost dances as he fashions a new hairdo. In the gayest possible atmosphere, the whole affair takes on the aspects of a party. Then in a twinkling, you're whisked under the dryer.

Maria comes to do the marital cure, speaking very fondly of her special clients, actresses, musicians, authors, opera stars. Whenever one has written a new book, Maria has brought it in readiness for her autograph. Opera singer Joan Sutherland is one of her most special patrons. Listening and looking about, you can't help but recognize many celebrities who make Revlon their beauty headquarters. Minutes spin by magically.

A smart young career girl Lorein Eyerly slips by, a pretty teenager in tow, readying her for a prize-winning week-end in London and a before-and-after article soon to appear in Seventeen Magazine. Lorein steals a few seconds to slip on her wig which Mr. Fred has newly redesigned. Pleased with his efforts, she rushes on to do live the teenage Natural Wonder to a waiting chauffeur. By now, Mr. Fred put the finishing touches on my new hairdo.

Thus, armed with new confidence gained through a new coif, we're ready for:

A VISIT TO THE HOUSE OF FABERGE, just off Fifth Avenue at 54th St. where Amelia Bassin, minus her famous grey wig but with her inch-long lashes fluttering in the breeze, holds forth in a handsome charcoal office, her desk chime-high with paper and props. Amelia is always alive with the latest news. The newest technique? Make-OP. Newest beauty aid? Flutter-lashes.

Amelia was quick to explain that Make-OP depends on a fascinating collection of cosmetics scientifically formulated to create the Optical illusion of a lower face... eyes... lips... nails. The secret is in the subtle application of actual lenses to shade and shape over basic complexion colors. "Up-to-the-minute stores with Faberge consultants will have copies of our 'Let's Make-OP' for your readers with our compliments." (Ask for yours next time you're shopping.)

"Help stamp out conformity," urged Amelia Bassin. "Put your best face forward" and proceeded to call in her make-up artist like to be at the Person Ball!

NEW "RAIN TIRE" FOR SAFER DRIVING

A "rain tire" has been introduced by United States Rubber Co. which is now available to motorists through the company's nationwide network of U. S. Royal dealers.

Called the Royal Laredo, the super low profile tire has been nicknamed the "rain tire" because tests have proved it to be particularly good for wet weather driving, according to Harold N. Barrett, divisional president for tires.

"We know it is outstanding in the rain," Mr. Barrett said. "You can imagine what it's like when the sun comes out."

Its traction and skid resistance on wet pavements is 33 per cent better than the present standard replacement tire. This is due to two factors:

The new tire has a unique seven-row tread design with six grooves to carry away water accumulated on the pavement. The standard tire has only four grooves in its conventional five-row tread design. This ability to carry away surface water is important because the tires on a car traveling at 60 miles per hour in a heavy rainstorm must move 15 gallons of water per second in order to obtain a proper grip on the pavement.

The new tire has nearly three times as many slots in its tread pattern as the former replacement tire. These slots—about 3,500 of them—act like a squeegee which wipe the surface of the road, improving traction under acceleration and giving greater stopping power when the brakes are applied. The combination of the additional grooves and slots in the tread also greatly reduce lateral skidding on turns.
