U.S. Foreign Aid Backed

Cincinnati —(RNS)— Roman Catholic college and seminary students were urged here to be informed on the "great good" U.S. foreign aid is accomplishing.

Father Ronan Hoffman, O.F.M., emphasized this point at a joint session of the first National College-Seminary Convention of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade on "World Poverty and Christian Responsibility."

Professor of missiology at the Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. Father Hoffman recently returned from his fourth tour of South America. He told delegates that there has been a great deal of propaganda on the misuse of foreign aid funds, but very little publicity on the great good brought about by such programs.

He urged them to acquire a truly Catholic or missionary spirit; to develop a concern for needs of Christians at home and abroad; study conditions of the world in which they live; become acquainted with all organizations, both secular and Catholic, which aim to serve mankind; become acquainted with the recent papal encyclicals dealing with the world; and to prepare themselves for a career of service either as a lay person or religious.

"If Christ were preaching to present day Americans," Father Hoffman said, "He might have used slightly different terms. He might have told us: 'I was hungry and you supported the work of the Food and Agricultural Organization, I was thirsty and you became a Papal Volunteer or a Peace Corps Worker to teach irrigation methods and bring men water. I was sick and you joined the World Health Organization to bring medical aid to the poor all over the world. I was in prison in the bondage of my skin, and you came to Alabama to visit me. I was naked, stripped of my human dignity my right to live decently, and you worked for my civil rights.'"

Father Hoffman continued: "Unfortunately, in the past, Christian piety has all too often seemed to be a withdrawal from the world and from men, an unwillingness to share the suffering of the world and man.

"It was not sufficiently infused with Christian love and mercy. It lacked human warmth and the world has risen in protest against this form of piety as a form of selfishness, as indifference to the world's sorrow. Against this protest only a reborn piety can stand: care for the life of another, even material bodily care, is spiritual in essence. Bread for myself is a material question, bread for my neighbor is a spiritual question."

The college delegates attending the convention at Our Lady of Cincinnati College heard discussions on personal apostolic service, the Peace Corps, ecumenical studies and missiological studies. The latter two were led by Sister Maria Assunta, C.S.C., Ph.D., vice-president and dean of faculty at St. Mary's College, Notre Dame, Ind.

Family Shrine Completed

Family shrine is blessed by Father Eugene Sweeney, assistant pastor of St. Mary's of the Lake, Watkins Glen. Shrine of Our Lady was planned and executed, even the statue, by members of the Serafino Beligotti family. Mr. and Mrs. Beligotti are at left, their twin sons, Richard and Robert are at right.

'High' Church, But No Curtains

Lulea, Sweden — (NC) — A church event that is unique in Sweden will take place here this winter when a group of lay electors join their diocesan clergy to choose the next Lutheran bishop of Luela.

The idea of giving laymen a voice in the election of bishops would ordinarily be sufficient to make headlines. But the balloting here is likely to reflect a more compelling issue in this country's religious life—and that is the struggle between high churchmen and liberal thinkers over the future course of Swedish Lutheranism.

Until a short time ago, only the clergy had the right to nominate three persons for a diocesan See, one of which would then be appointed by the government and consecrated by the archbishop of Uppsala. Now a number of lay persons equal to the number of clergy will have a part in the nomination. Since the lay electors are likely to find some sympathetic clergymen on their side, it is very possible they will control the future selection of Swedish bishops.

The motivation behind the new law is not an altruistic desire to return to the early days of Christianity when bishops used to be nominated by popular acclaim. Rather it represents a growing trend toward secularization of Protestant church affairs in Sweden. The trend is reflected in a theological liberalism, anti-sacramentalism, and a move to encompass all church organizations within a democratic process.

The election in Lulea may not be a victory for the church liberals, however, since most of the laity in the diocese are evangelical Lutherans of the Laestadian sect, a group that grew up around the 19th century reformer, Lars Levi Laestadius. Laestadians adhere to a strict biblical Christianity and frown on such worldly frills as ties for men and curtains in homes.

Although essentially members of a low church movement, Laestadians have found a common cause with high churchmen in the Lulea diocese ever since 1960 because of their mutual opposition to the ordination of women priests. It appears that the elections here, far from being a secular-liberal victory, might swing toward the high church movement.

One of the candidates often mentioned is the Rev. Carl-Henric Martling, professor of pastoral theology at Uppsala University. Another is the Rev. Gustaf Danell, a pastor in Vaxjo in southern Sweden. Dr. Danell has been nominated by the clergy of various dioceses on eight occasions, but he has never received government approval because of his high church views and his opposition to the ordination of women.

Marian Shrine Completed By Watkins Glen Family

A family shrine, designed and carried out by the members of the Serafino Beligotti family in Watkins Glen, was recently completed. The shrine, dedicated to Our Lady under the title of "Causa Nostrae Laetitatae," (Cause of Our Joy) was blessed on August 15, Feast of the Assumption by Father Eugene Sweeney, assistant pastor of their parish, St. Mary's of the Lake.

The Beligotti boys, Richard and Robert, students at St. Bernard's Seminary in Rochester, designed the statue of Mary and the child Jesus and modeled it in clay. The natural stone pedestal contains stones from the Sea of Galilee; Mt. Saviour Monastery in Elmira, and St. Joseph's Abbey in Massachusetts.

The seminarians and their father constructed the little house from California redwood and then surrounded the shrine with flowers. The family shrine was built, says Mrs. Beligotti, in thanksgiving to Our Lady "for her love and constant assistance."

Charity Ladies Announce Slate

New officers elected to head the Ladies of Charity in Elmira were announced this week. Bishop Kearney gave his approval to the elections according to Rev. David Mattie, spiritual director of the group, who made the announcement.

The officers are: Mrs. J. Howard Ferguson, president; Mrs. Robert H. Huddle Jr., vice president; Mrs. Donald E. Kalec, treasurer; Mrs. Ronald Prechtl, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Charles W. Backes, secretary, and Mrs. Alfred A. Mitchell, assistant secretary.

The Ladies of Charity executive central council will meet Wednesday, Sept. 8, at 8:30 p.m.

Jefferson Hotel In Renovation

Watkins Glen—At the midway point in an extensive renovation project, the Jefferson Hotel and Motel at Watkins Glen is retaining its original atmosphere and at the same time taking on an appearance of today's architecture.

The Old Inn, established in 1834 was named after the original town, now Watkins Glen. It has added a new motel with ample provisions for guest parking space.

Hosts Ken and Anne McClenathan, widely known as Mr. and Mrs. Mac have continued the long famous dinner menu, changed daily. In addition they now feature their original gourmet smorgasbord nightly except on Monday.

Spotlighted on the hot table can be found prime ribs of beef, roast glazed turkey, baked Virginia ham, lobster Newburg, Swedish meatballs, hot casseroles and vegetables, fresh shrimp and more than 40 salads and dessert selections are available on the cold table.

Situated in the center of Watkins Glen on the corner of routes 14 and 414.
