At Our House

Cool and Crazy

By MARY TINLEY DALY

Early September seems reluctant to release its hold on summer, producing sizzling days with August-like intensity.

Realizing the season is almost over, with similar reluctance, we cling to summer days, summer ways. For a while at least, we can still dress in cottons, entertain casually, let the children play under the hose.

Finally, when the cool of the morning has been supplanted by atmosphere shunned by mad dogs and Englishmen, we finish kitchen chores.

Nothing to do now but clean up and escape. How cool the rest of the house feels, a mere 90 degrees.

Somewhat, though, in the evening, the house's stifling experience. Calm and collected by this time, we open the refrigerator door and, as a neighbor had warned his wand, as though it had spontaneously grown them, this white box yields up its treasure: platter of golden-fried chicken, bowl of potato salad with flecks of golden carrot, pale green cucumbers, fat red tomatoes. And on top stands the proud and quite sane "Crazy Cake" with its tart lemon icing.

"How nice," exclaim family and friends. "Just a cool, simple supper."

"And so easy," say we, and mean it.

Every woman reader of this column has no doubt gone through the same deal—chicken, salad and the like. But would you like to know how to make "Crazy Cake?" Reads really crazy, as you can see by the recipe. But try it and see!

Good summer, winter, spring or fall, the recipe was submitted by Florence McGrath Sullivan to "A Little Bit of Butter," cookbook extraordinary, published by Mothers and Girls Attending Georgetown Visitation Preparatory School, Washington, D.C.
