8th Graders In College?

New York — (RNS) — An experimental program to speed up the granting of B.A. degrees was announced by Fordham University at ceremonies in which the Catholic school installed a new president and broke ground for a $15 million addition to its Lincoln Center campus here.

The Bachelor of Arts program, beginning next year, will enable a group of 40 or 50 selected students from Fordham Preparatory School to enter the college after completing the seventh grade and receive the undergraduate degree six years later.

This program reduces from nine to six years the usual length of time for an eighth-graded to finish high school and college.

New president of Fordham is Father Leo P. McLaughlin, S.J., who succeeds Father Vincent T. O'Keefe, S.J., Father O'Keefe was named an assistant to Father Pedro Arrupe, general of the Society of Jesus (Jesuits) and will assume his new post in Rome.

The ground-breaking ceremony was held for the university's new 14-story classroom and office building and a three-story theater. Housed in the new structure will be Fordham's School of Education, Business, Social Service and General Studies. Fordham, which has its main campus in the Bronx, completed its School of Law at Lincoln Center in 1963. Still planned for the center as a communications arts unit costing some $19 million.
