

First Gift, to Becket Hall

A set of the Encyclopedia Britannica is the first gift to the Becket Hall Library. The gift was made by the Courier-Journal to the new residence for seminarians making their college studies at St. John Fisher College. Harold Connor, Courier advertising manager, presented the set of books to Very Rev. Joseph L. Hogan, Becket Hall rector.

Private Schools Get Fair Share Of Federal Aid

Washington—(RNS)—A spot survey conducted by the U.S. Office of Education indicates that distribution and use of funds under the new federal school aid law already is functioning in approximately the ratio which reflects the makeup of the nation's school population.

This means that parochial school students are receiving their allotted ratio.

The survey covering 62 school districts in 12 states, revealed that 37,000 of the 347,000 children in the federally financed programs attend private schools—10.7 per cent of the total. The largest percentage of private students are Catholic.

When the historic education bill was passed, it was estimated that 12 per cent would go to assist parochial and other private school students. Latest estimates show that approximately 13 per cent of the total school population attends private schools.

Church Advances in Race Relations, Has Long Way To Go, Ahmann States

Chicago—(NC)—The National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice reported general success for its programs during 1965, and set its sights on a broad-based expansion of its work for 1966.

Executive director Mathew Ahmann warned, however, that "there is a long way to go."

"Catholic lay and clerical leadership is still too distant from leadership in the movement in the Negro community," Ahmann said in his annual report. "There is a gap here which will pose major problems for the Church in gearing up to a more adequate response to the opportunities to work for racial justice, in Northern communities especially."

"Overall, the Catholic community seems far from the reality of the slum ghetto filled with frustration and despair. Some cities give evidence of a growing split in the Catholic community over the issue of a developing local civil rights movement."

"With the direction along which the Catholic Church was beginning to accelerate, should such a split occur, it would be tragic indeed," Ahmann said.

To increase the commitment of the Church to civil rights, the NCCIJ outlined a wide expansion of its program for 1966. Among specific goals were:

- Increased Catholic involvement in poverty programs.
- Heavy emphasis on Project Equality, designed to eliminate discrimination by Church institutions and their suppliers, with establishment of the program in 40 areas within the next two years.

• Expansion of the NCCIJ's Traveling Workshops in Human Relations, to offer "intensive in-service training to parochial and public school teachers and other personnel, such as police officers, in various parts of the country."

Aren't Isn't A Contraption

Memphis—(NC)—Sister Mary Marie, a Dominican nun teaching in St. Dominic's School for Boys here, had finished a lengthy lesson on contraptions in her English class. "Now, can anyone now tell me the name for such words as 'isn't, aren't, and won't?'" she asked. A boy in the back row answered enthusiastically: "Sure, they're contraptions!"

Fisher Slates Debate Tourney

More than 250 colleges and universities have been invited to compete in the annual Fisher Forum intercollegiate debate tournament at St. John Fisher College Feb. 4 and 5.

Last year's winners, Bellarmine College of Louisville, Kentucky, will defend their title against 29 other selected top ranking teams in the two-day oratorical tourney.

Extemporaneous and original individual public speaking contests will be held in addition to team debates.

Feature speaker at a dinner for contestants and officials Feb. 4 will be U.S. Representative Frank Horton.

Spectators who wish to observe the competition may obtain additional information from J. Lloyd Lill, moderator of the Fisher Forum debate society, at St. John Fisher College.
