"It is far from true that because we cling to Christ we are divorced from earth's duties and joys. On the contrary, faith, hope, and the love of Christ impel us to serve our brethren."

—Statement by all men from the world's Catholic bishops at the 1962 opening of the Vatican Council.

Vocation Dropoff

Sifting Facts from Fiction

By RUSSELL SHAW

Washington — (NC) — A national research program designed to take the guesswork out of talk about the vocations crisis and to establish its nature and deriver at the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate (CARA) here.

Costing at least $150,000 and, in its major investigative phases, running some three years, the program will seek answers to such questions as:

- Why do people want to become priests and nuns or go into lay apostolate work?
- What are American seminaries really like?
- Why do so many candidates drop out of seminaries?
- What can be done to improve techniques of recruiting and training prospective priests, nuns and lay apostles?

The Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate, which will coordinate and manage this research program, is a national socio-religious research agency established in March, 1965.

Its executive director is Divine Word Father Louis J. Lubetka, an anthropologist and expert on who has done research in Papua and New Guinea and published several books in his field.

Interviewed at CARA headquarters in a converted row house near the Catholic University of America, Father Lubetka stressed the scope of the CARA vocation research program, its purposes, and its professional character.

The program will be in four phases. The first, already underway and to be completed in a matter of months, is a survey of vocation research efforts, Catholic and Non-Catholic, American and foreign and the compilation of a bibliography.

The second, "general" phase, scheduled to start in September, will begin with a comprehensive survey of the facts formation.

One major aim of this phase will be to develop a "typology" of institutions — a scientific classification of the types of seminaries and houses of formation. Another objective will be to gain insights into factors that influence the number and quality of vocations and the rate of "perseverance" by candidates.

This second phase will be conducted by a major Catholic university (the contract is now being negotiated, Father Lubetka said). The timetable calls for it to be completed in two years. Because of financial limitations, it will concentrate at first on the priesthood. Later, however, it will take in the religious life and the lay apostolate, too.

The program's third, "specialized" phase will consist of an "in-depth analysis" of various special questions by qualified individuals and groups. The questions will include matters affecting the vocations candidate, matters related to vocations promoters and recruiters, training centers, and the "spirit of the times" as a factor in the vocations picture.

Studies in the third phase can begin while the second phase is still in progress, Father Lubetka said. All three phases are expected to be finished within three years.

The fourth and final phase of the program will be a continuing, "open-ended" study and review of vocations questions. CARA plans to establish a vocations desk and to maintain a "vocation index" providing continually updated data.

One immediate aim of the program, Father Lubetka said, is to "sift facts from fiction" in regard to vocations.

The CARA director's own hypothesis is that the completed study will present a generally optimistic picture of vocations.

"We're going through a real crisis in vocations at present, and it can go either way," he said. "But if we study the situation now, we can do something about it. We can still be masters of the situation — at this point."

THEY PRAY FOR YOU

Penitent cloistered Carmelite nuns in Harissa, Lebanon, spend their lives in constant prayer for you. Their chapel was built by an American who reads this column. Now they need help to enlarge their convent (total cost: $3,731) for girls with vocations to the cloistered life. Build it yourself in your loved ones' memory! Send at least as much as you can ($50, $100, $75, $50, $25, $10, $5, $2). The nuns and those who follow them will pray for you and yours perpetually.
