

U.S. Negro Nuns Mark 75th Year of Order

Conwells Heights, Pa. — the Catholic Church were present as alumni.

Auxiliary Bishop Harold R. Perry, S.V.D., of New Orleans, first of his race to be elevated to the American hierarchy in the 20th Century, offered the Mass and remained for the day-long festivities on the grounds of Blessed Sacrament Motherhouse.

Bishop Perry was taught by Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament in a parish school at Lake Charles, La. Another guest of honor was Mother Ann Michael, a graduate of the order's high school at Rock Castle, Va., who is now superior general of the racially integrated Franciscan Sisters of Rice Lake, Wis.

The Blessed Sacrament network of schools was founded by Mother Katherine Drexel, whose banker father left her the income of a $15 million trust fund in 1885. On her death at the age of 96 in 1895, it was estimated that she had spent—some of roughly $20 million for her own and other Catholic charities.

She was the last heir and the trust was designated for division among a score of Catholic institutions. Her own order was not included since it did not exist when her father's will was written.

Today, Blessed Sacrament Sisters staff 52 parish grade schools and nine high schools in 21 states, mostly in the deep South, but spreading also from Harlem to Chicago in areas of Negro concentration.

GOD LOVE YOU Most Reverend Fulton J. Sheen

"If my neighbor is stronger than I, I fear him; if he is weaker than I, I despise him." Such is the modern judgment of the psychiatrist, Dr. Jean de Rougemont. Earlier, the Palmist speaks of the "arrogance of those who have much and the despotism of those who are proud." How can the rich avoid feeling superior to the poor? How can the poor avoid being humiliated? The answer is that the strong must see their weakness and the rich see their poverty. How really strong are the strong? They may avoid great vices, but can they give up cigarettes for a week to help the poor? Are they such masters of themselves that they can turn down the third cocktail (or give up the first) and use the money instead to buy sulfone for a leper? How rich are the rich? Let them look inside themselves. In what virtue are they rich? Rich in chastity? Rich in charity? Rich in faith?

Once the mighty see themselves as nothing and the rich see themselves as impoverished, then they will love the weak as their brothers and the poor as their fellow beggars for the grace of God. If the strong love themselves despite all their weakness, then why not love weaknesses in others? If the rich love themselves despite their inner nakedness, then why not love a lesser poverty in others? That is why Our Lord told us to love our neighbor as "ourselves. Why not more than self? Because, if I love myself—knowing myself as I do, knowing how utterly weak I am—then I have the measure of how I am to pour out love to others.

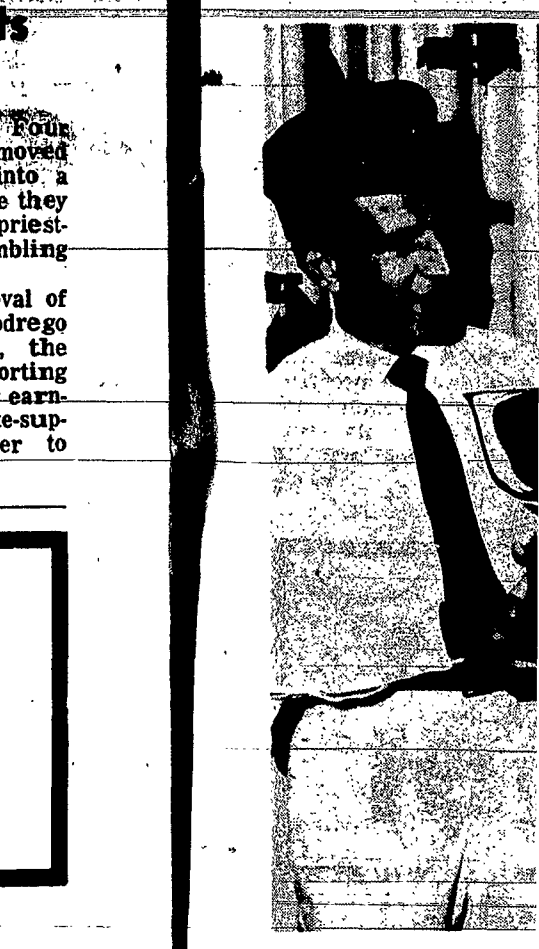

We live in a world divided between the rich and the poor. We live in that kind of a church—poor parishes and rich parishes. Even bishops and priests speak of a parish being "good" when they mean it is economically rich. Somehow or other, we have to get out of this slavish standard of affluence which is so opposed to the cross of Christ. To that end, we make the following proposal: that you, or your parish, club, school or office, undertake the sponsorship of one of the poor areas of the world which has been investigated by the Apostolic delegate. Write to us and we will send you the name of this diocese, its location, the number of priests, catechists and faithful it has. Thus, you will be sure that you have a needy object for sacrifice and service and not one based on a haphazard appeal from an uninvestigated source. The Church will not allow you to sponsor this diocese for more than one year because there are so many poor dioceses in the world. Look into your weakness and you will love the weakness of others. Look into your poverty stricken soul and you will serve poverty stricken bodies. Write to me. God Love You!
