The Legion of Mary: 5
Ecumenism in Deed

By BILL BUECHEL
 (This is the fifth in a series of articles on the Legion of Mary in the Diocese of Rochester. Today's topic deals with Legion efforts in the ecumenical area.)

Ordinarily, members of the Legion of Mary do not take time to stand around waiting for their ships to come in, but recently they have been doing just that at the Charlotte Docks in Rochester.

As the big ships tie up, the legionaries reach their hands forward, not to take some mythical treasure, but to offer the warm and real grasp of the ecumenical spirit. The legionaries give the visiting seaman friendship, souvenir folders to Rochester, and directions to churches of all denominations.

Many legionaries in the Rochester Diocese are engaged wholeheartedly in the ecumenical movement. They are organizing and attending ecumenical meetings, and speaking to individual non-Catholics about the Church, letting them know in every way possible, that Catholics are really interested and truly love them in Christ.

The system of home visitation is the oldest and most widely used method by which the Legion of Mary spreads this spirit of friendliness and understanding between religions. The Legion Handbook quotes Bishop Williams, the former Archbishop of Birmingham, as saying, "We must always remember that religion is caught, not taught. It is a flame that is spread by love, and not in any other way. We take it only from those we think friendly to us. Those who we regard as indifferent or hostile cannot recommend religion to us."

For many years, members of the Legion of Mary, acting in this spirit have been visiting

'Storm Signal'
Drug Addiction Documentary Set

A one-hour documentary on drug addiction, sponsored by Xerox entitled "Storm Signal," will be seen in Rochester over WHEC-TV (Channel 10) on Wednesday, Sept. 7 from 10 to 11 p.m.

The decision to syndicate the program to more than 100 local stations around the country marks the fourth time that Xerox has created its own network for a documentary program. The "fourth network" system proved successful in all previous programings.

Producer-director Jim Lipscomb of Drew Associates, which filmed the unusual TV documentary, saw and talked to more than 1,000 addicts before selecting a young couple hopelessly "hooked" by the drug habit, identified only as Jim and Helen.

Lipscomb and his cameramen moved into the couple's Bronx apartment and lived with them and their 3-year-old son 12 hours a day for four months to graphically depict the family's everyday existence.

Neither Helen nor Jim is an heir, lucky gambler or skilled in earning the $30 a day each needs for drugs. The source of their comfort is what Jim can steal and peddle to eager "fences," which can involve about $500 a day in merchandise.

"Storm Signal" was a first-place prize winner at the Venice (Italy) Film Festival. The only American-produced program accepted for the competition, it was awarded top honors in August in the Festival's television documentary category.

Donald L. Clark, Xerox vice president for advertising, approved the budget for television filming production after inconclusive opinions from the producer as to whether the project could be done at all. "It was a $125,000 gamble," says Clark, "but it paid off."

Xerox lists three reasons for its interest in this in-depth documentary: a lesson, primarily for teenagers, on the dangers of drug addiction; proof that addiction can be overcome; and demonstration of hope for drug addicts.
