NEW CONCEPT IN LIVING FOR RETIRED

Remember the stir created by "Life Begins at 40" and how it threw a wonderful new light on a subject most people hadn't thought about in that way before. Today "Life Begins at 40" is dated in more ways than one. Forty is now younger than ever. And that attractive blonde on the other side of the room might possibly have just turned grandmother. Part of the "changing-aging" phenomenon of the Sixties is a result of increased longevity—with every age level being adjusted accordingly. Today's retired is a different breed than his counterpart of another generation. Conditioned during his middle years to the modern living syndrome, grandfather often has developed a raft of hobbies, a fondness for things cultural and a love for stimulating conversation that circumvents the well worn topic of aches and pains. Gradually disappearing are the Victorian austere nursing homes where residents lead a completely quiet, routine-tethered existence. Fewer retired, too, are staying on with married children because they prefer to lead a well rounded life among their active peers with similar interests. As a result, during the past decade—primarily in Florida

Poland Revisited After 64 Years

Sixty-four years ago, a sixteen year old girl named Mary Ann Hojka left Poznan, Poland to come to America and enter the Congregation of the Sisters of St. Joseph of Rochester.

This summer, that same girl—now called Sister Theophila and as young at heart as ever—returned to Poznan for the first time since 1902. Making this trip to coincide with Poland's 1,000-year anniversary of its reception of Christianity, Sister Theophila visited both her relatives and the dearly-loved and remembered shrines and churches of her youth.

This double pilgrimage carried her all over Poland, for there were twelve children in her immediate family, two sisters still living in the old country, and her nephews, nieces, grandnephews and grandnieces alone number in the hundreds.

Although she experienced some difficulty in getting a visa to enter Poland because she is a religious, Sister said that once in her native land, she received nothing but the greatest courtesy and respect from everyone, including the Communist officials whom she met.

This is, of course, a year of intense religious celebration in Poland, despite the disapproval of the government, and Sister said that the churches were filled for daily Mass with crowds of Polish people, both young and old, and processions and services were carried on with "quiet force" when attempts were made to prevent them.

All schools, orphanages, and hospitals once owned by the Church now belong to the government, although many Sister-nurses still work in the hospitals in their religious habits and are paid a small salary by the government. Other nuns are allowed to staff homes for the aged and to work as secretaries and sacristans in the parishes. There are still religious novitiates and seminaries open but the number of sisters and priests is decreasing.

Sister said that the people seem contented. Roads, buildings and homes are being built at quite a rapid pace, and there is enough food and work for all, although few luxuries.

Her two-month visit passed swiftly, but Sister Theophila returned to her home mission at Immaculate Heart Convent with enough pictures, maps and stories of her trip to enable the other Sisters to re-live the joyful event many times over with her.
