Let Your Dryer
Do The Ironing

Sounds impossible? Not in this modern age of Permanent Press fabrics and automatic clothes dryers. Yes, it's true, soon your dryer will be doing all your ironing.

Permanent press is a shape setting process that uses chemicals and heat-curing to make garments and home products entirely wrinkle resistant. However, when these fabrics are washed, wrinkles set in. ONLY with an automatic dryer can you "relax" the fibers so that wrinkles fall out and garments return to their permanent press shape. In fact, most clothing manufacturers have instructions on the garments that advise: "For best results, tumble dry and hang on hanger as soon as possible."

A family that uses permanent press garments and an automatic dryer is benefiting in many ways. One, surely not to be overlooked, is the savings to your clothing budget. Because permanent press fabrics are stronger, they last longer when properly cared for. You can get by with fewer garments, too. That's because it's all done the quick and simple way — from washer to dryer to clothes rack.

Why not send for our eight page booklet entitled "A Short Course in Automatic Washer and Dryer Buymanship"? There's a special section that tells about permanent press. This booklet is yours free of charge. Just mail coupon below.
