Focus on Adults

The Sisters drop in, alone or together, for brief visits — unannounced, so that the ladies will not feel obliged to give their homes a special house-cleaning! Visiting shut-ins, parishioners in hospitals or nursing homes also takes up a good portion of their time.

This working almost constantly with adults is something new for both the Sisters and the lay people, and both feel that they are learning a great deal and establishing much more meaningful relationships with the "other state" of life than they had ever had previously.

Much of the time, priests, Sisters, and lay members of these two parishes are "playing it by ear" as Father Lynch says. They are trying out new methods — improving, discarding and experimenting anew. The Sisters try to be present for every type of parish function, from ground-breakings to meetings that break up at midnight. They are discovering the need of re-structuring their daily schedules and have been given every sort of consideration in this by Mother Agnes Cecilia and Mother Bride, their Major Superiors.

At present neither parish has a church, a school or a convent. Holy Name has an almost-completed Recreation Center, and Holy Spirit has a house which is serving as the rectory. Neighboring parishes to each, as well as Mercy and Mooney High Schools, have been very generous in offering their facilities whenever they are needed.

No one could sit down and itemize the work the priests or Sisters or lay people of the Holy Name and Holy Spirit Parishes will be doing in the future, but whatever it is, it will be the result of all the "People of God" striving together as a parish family, so it certainly ought to be great.

Even in the face of so overwhelming evidence, the since the Protestant Union a kind of subtle dissonance on preaching in the Catholic Church. Perhaps a reaction to the centrality of the Pope. He thought that as far as sermons were concerned were quite secondary. Sacrifice of the Mass.

The really important was that people get to by implication at least mon was quite incidental up until fairly recently take much of an excuse the Sunday sermon. And this even in the fact that the man people would be reading on Sunday morning. To sermons to such occasions, Forty Hours votions was, in light highly unrealistic.

The Vatican Council put the whole thing in the Decree on the Liturgy: "Although the liturgy is above all worship of the Divine it nevertheless contains instruction for the faithful in the liturgy God speaks and Christ is claiming his Gospel." The following directive in paragraph 35: "The sermon is part of the service . . . the preaching is to be full exactitude and fidelity, sermon, moreover, its content mainly fraternal and liturgical so its character should be a proclamation of God's faithful works in the history of the world. Christ ever made present within us, especially the celebration of the Eucharist. The Council clearly that the readings and the homily at Mass are vitally important to the people to be edified and lovingly sacrificed.

Realistically we must see a certain problem especially in our big cities. It is by no means a big problem as it times made out to announcements are to a very minimum, and the Masses are to be widely separated. But reading a time problem means is that the message is made more concise.

I suppose that all one time or another a certain discouragement preaching. Too many
