An estimated 1600 attended CEF meeting at Eastridge High School recently to hear candidates for Spring constitutional convention. An added 400 were unable to get into packed auditorium. Candidates voiced their stand on controversial Blaine Amendment. Story on Page One.

'Fair Share' — CEF Goal

HOW THEY STAND — Reuben Gross of Staten Island, President of the New York Council of Citizens for Educational Freedom (CEF), points to chart showing how Constitutional Convention candidates stand on Article XI, Section 3, of the New York State Constitution, which prohibits aid to children in church-related schools. Sixty-nine percent of the 349 candidates of all parties who responded to the CEF survey favor elimination of the section, commonly known as the "Blaine Amendment."

Can We Attract Others Without Unity Ourselves?

Vatican City — (NC) — The Church needs among its people an "interior and spontaneous spirit of obedience" Pope Paul told his weekly general audience here " . . . so that the Vatican Council's fruits may not be reaped in vain."

The Pope admitted that obedience has been a frequent theme in his recent talks. But he said it clearly needs repeating "because of a certain intolerance, a certain spirit of indiscipline and emancipation which keeps cropping up here and there in some sectors of the People of God, until recently completely exemplary in their observance of obedience."

"It needs repeating, too," he said, "because of the necessity which has arisen in this postconciliar period of internal cohesion within the Church. How can we have a renewal of spirit, activity and structure in the Church if it is not solidly united within itself? How can we approach the separated brethren if division — even though purely in the realm of intention or discipline — diminishes the harmony which is and must be characteristic of the ecclesial society, cools charity and weakens our capacity to give an example or an explanation of the faith to those who ask us for one?"

Ford Fund Aids Birth Control

New York — (RNS) — Grants totaling nearly $2 million were announced by the Ford Foundation for projects relating to birth control and family planning educational efforts.

The largest single grant went to the Planned Parenthood Federation, which will receive $400,000 for a program designed to help communities make effective use of family planning funds that are available from governmental agencies. It will also seek to stimulate hospital and voluntary community groups and state and local health departments to expand family planning services.

Catholic University in Louvain, Belgium, received a grant of $200,000 for research aimed at finding more accurate methods of predicting ovulation in women.
