I am a college student. Be-fore you label me either the all-American girl, who has been ing, as the case may be. Religion is a big thing on the college campus, a healthy sign no matter what side of the all-American girl, who has been the topic of many an analysis by national magazines, or an acid-head whose John the Bap-tist is Tim Leary and whose god is LSD, let me tell you—I am not. I am a bit more demanding of the right direction, but movel is the topic of many an analysis than place myself on the de fence you're on. Christianity is more important to us than any denominational affiliation; we are more concerned with the reality of faith as lived in our lives, and, it's the spirit of the law rather than its letter

Students Meet Area Employers

Recruitment representatives from more than 55 local and area industrial firms and businesses-large and small - met with more than 1,100 area college students during Rochester's first "Project Opportunity," at the Chamber of Commerce this week

Sponsored by the Rochester-Monroe County Area Development Council of the Chamber of Commerce, the two-day program made it possible for college students who live in this area to discover the wide variety of job opportunities available to them.

"We hope to keep Rochester talent by getting our job oppor-tunity story across to the students quickly and easily-all under one roof. Equally important, 'Project Opportunity' afforded a convenient way for employers in this area to interview qualified college students," according to Ernest W. Mauer, general chairman of the project's committee. The local program is one of several naionally accepted and publicized "Community Career Opportunity Conferences" held throughout the country.

St. John Pupils Share Christmas

Each of the seven grades at St. John of Rochester School decided this year to give up their annual Christmas party and give the money to the children at the Joseph Ave. Center.

An elected representative from each grade accompanied his teacher to the Center where the presentation was made to Sister M. Concepta.
