

He Wears Two Collars

He wears two collars — one is that of a Catholic priest, the other is a regular shirt collar with a silver bar on the right side and a small silver cross on the left. The man is Father Paul Freemeser, assistant pastor of St. John the Evangelist Church in Rochester. At least once a week and about every other Sunday Father Freemeser becomes Lt. Freemeser, Chaplain's Corps, U.S. Army Reserve.

How does he compare the two jobs? In his own words: "Really they are both the same, it is my duty to serve the spiritual and moral needs of the people in or out of uniform."

The parish of Lt. Freemeser is much larger in area than that of Father Freemeser. The 391st Basic Training Regiment, of which Lt. Freemeser is the Catholic Chaplain, has units not only in Rochester, but in Auburn, Newark and Syracuse as well.

One of his major duties is to see that religious services are held for the men whenever they meet on a Sunday. As there is no Protestant chaplain assigned to the 391st in the Rochester area, the services of an associate chaplain are utilized to provide a service. In most instances, Rev. Keith Dewey, a former 391st chaplain, conducts them.

Conducting services for the troops are only a part of Lt. Freemeser's duties as a chaplain. In addition he serves as an advisor to the commander on any spiritual matters that may affect the men in the unit. He is also available for individual consultations. An old army expression "Tell it to the Chaplain" is very real to Father Freemeser. "I want the men to feel that I'm here to help them with their problems. What a person's religion is makes no difference. If I can help them, I will."

Does he get many requests for help and advice? His reply to the question was "Yes, I think the fellows see me around and can take advantage of it to sit down and talk over their personal problems with me."

Another part of his job, and not a very pleasant one, is being a member of a team for the notification of the next of kin for soldiers killed in Viet Nam. He has, along with an Active Army Advisor from the Mun. St. Training Center, made one such call.

A chaplain's work, in the Army Reserve is not easy. In many cases it involves travel to be with the unit to which you are assigned. The 98th Training Division, of which the 391st Regiment is a part, has units throughout upstate New York.

Discussion of Violin Set at First Unitarian

Louis M. Condam will discuss the development since the Elmer J. Anderson, chairman, Middle Ages, illustrate how they have been made and are made today and answer technical questions on violin sound and resonance at an open meeting on Sunday, Jan. 22, at 8 p.m. at the First Unitarian Church, 220 Winton Road S.

It will be demonstrated whether a recently made violin compares tonally with one made by a master of three or four centuries ago. The musician will be Anastasia Jempelis, first violinist of the Rochester Philharmonic orchestra and on the Eastman School violin faculty. She will play part of three movements of Bach's Sonata in G minor No. 1 on her Grancino (an old master violin) and part on a concert violin made by the speaker, Mr. Condam.

Condam is a member of the Catgut Acoustical Society. He worked with Mrs. Conditte Hutchins on her article which appeared in Scientific American magazine on modern discoveries about old masters' violins.

Until his retirement about two years ago, Condam did research for Eastman Kodak in their color print department on perfection of dye transfer process, a system of vital importance in the development of color film.

This program is sponsored by 'Bali, Java, Sumatra' Color Travelogue. Philip Walker's color travelogue, "Bali, Java and Sumatra," is the next scheduled presentation in the Civic Music Association's current series at Eastman Theatre. Showing is scheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 24 at 8:15 p.m.

According to a spokesman, "Viewers will be thrilled by the lavish sights of the vast island of Indonesia, particularly the island of Bali with authentic dances and music."

A final travelogue is slated for Jan. 31.
