Instruction For Retarded

Pittsburgh — (RNS) — One of the newest and most challenging fields of Confraternity of Christian Doctrine work, reaching the mentally retarded child, came in for study at the 12th National and 5th Inter-American Congress of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine here.

Two speakers, a nun and a lay teacher, both specializing in the spiritual instruction of the retarded, urged CCD teachers to give special attention to the new apostolate.

Added Sister Mary John of Los Angeles: "If a Christian leader is worthy of the name, he will go to the mentally retarded and give himself to this child, remembering that he is a person of unique and irreplaceable value, and in some ways of infinite worth, one with inalienable rights, including the right to religious education."

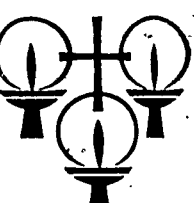

A Waikiki Question -- Where's Bishop Sheen?

The Courier's special correspondent in Honolulu, Hawaii, sent us the following item from the Sunday Star-Bulletin and Advertiser for Jan. 22, from the paper's Question Box edited by Bert Darr:

QUESTION: Please settle a dispute. I say Bishop Fulton Lewis Sheen, is dead and hasn't been in a television series for years. Also tell me something about him, and what was the name of his once popular show? Thanks. — Mrs. Lois Mack, Waikiki. (Also for Andrew T. Kearns, Honolulu.)

ANSWER: We hope you're not thinking of another well known broadcaster, by your use of "Lewis" in Sheen's name. Mutual commentator Fulton Lewis Jr. DID die last summer, BUT Bishop JOHN Sheen is still hale and hearty at the spry age of nearly 72. The erudite prelate, born in El Paso, ILLINOIS, May 8, 1895, holds about a dozen degrees from as many different universities. Sheen preached in London's Westminster Cathedral and lectured at Cambridge University, England, as well as conducting an NBC radio series and his popular TV programs in the 50s. Sheen's television program, which gained fame when it once competed with Ed Sullivan's video show for ratings, was entitled "Life Is Worth Living." The good Bishop only recently retired as auxiliary bishop of New York.
