Little List

By MARY TINLEY DALY

As one who has lived for years with an incurable optimist, I've learned the only way to worry, and get the utmost feminine satisfaction out of the procedure, is to worry in silence.

Oh, when there is a matter of deep mutual concern, the Head of the House goes along 100%. Even then, though, his approach is different: like the good reporter he is, he first "gets the whole story," seeks every possible solution and conscientiously tries to solve the problem.

But he doesn't worry the way I do, "stewing" he calls it, with all the accompanying "What ifs?" "Just supposings" and "Wouldn't it be awful?"

Long ago, and probably forgotten by himself, he gave me a clue to a compromise in our worry department by pointing out a passage in Lewis Carroll's "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland":

"The horror of that moment," the King went on, "I shall never, never forget!"

"You will, though," the Queen said, "if you don't make a memorandum of it."

And that, my dears, is how my Little Lists began, a practice that brings momentary relief by recognizing, in writing, current problems. The list also contains some of the problems too trivial for fretting aloud, but worrisome all the same.

Clearing out the bottom bureau drawer recently, the catchall that is in itself a cause for worry "if something should happen" and my heirs were to try to disentangle the hodgepodge, I came across last year's list, dutifully titled "1966 Worries."

"Matthew's fingers": Now that was a real cause for alarm, when one of the twins had dropped a heavy barbell on his hand and there was fear he might lose two fingers, a calamity more fully averted. A prayer of thanksgiving as we re-read the memo.

Down the list, "Income Tax": Just this time last year, after the return had been mailed, I'd conjured up a full head of steam over those figures. Supposing after all our care, we'd made a mistake in arithmetic, in our favor, not Uncle Sam's, and some far-off computer would reach out its mechanical tentacles and summon us? We kept that tax file within easy reach all summer. Just in case.

Next item, "Blankets": Now what in the world was a blanket worry? Oh, yes. Had we put moth flakes in the winter blankets after washing them and before storing them? In the heat of a July day, we undid the blankets — and found we'd put the moth flakes in.

"Unpaid shoe bill": For some unaccountable reason, we paid that bill three times, finally receiving the rather embarrassing notation: "Overpayment. Credit. Do not pay." Well, no barefoot in the park for this family!

"Crazy Cake Recipe" was another 1966 worry: A reader had asked for our Crazy Cake Recipe. We sent it to her, then came the uneasy panic that we might have left out an essential ingredient and ruined the poor woman's cookery. If regular readers wondered why the recipe was reprinted in a following column, that's why.

Most of the rest of our '66 worries didn't come through at all on the 1967 re-reading.

"Magazine article": What magazine article? We were to have written one? Read one and pass it on? We'll never know.

"Rel. Aff.": A relative's affliction? We'd hardly forget that; a religious affair? We were supposed to bring a cake to a church supper? Join in a rosary? Make a novena?

"Michael's Birthday": What about it? Well, Michael is due for another one and we'll make up to him for whatever we were worrying about last year!

Thus, the 1966 Little List is supplanted by its 1967 successor. Now we can go ahead and worry to our heart's content.

Well, "stew" if you will!

Sacred Heart Graduates Meeting Set in Montreal

The Sixteenth Biennial Conference of the Associated Alumnae of the Sacred Heart will be held in Montreal from Wednesday, April 26th through Sunday, April 30.

This Conference, which coincides with the opening of Expo '67, will be attended by delegates and alumnae from 8 colleges and 33 preparatory schools which are conducted by the Religious of the Sacred Heart throughout the United States and Canada.

In addition, there will be delegates from 29 chapters which are organized by alumnae in cities where there is no Sacred Heart School.

Headquarters for the Conference will be the Queen Elizabeth Hotel where the Banquet will be held on Saturday evening.

Special buses will provide transportation to the business sessions and luncheon which will alternate between the Sacred Heart Academy and the College Sophie Barat in Montreal. Theme of the conference is: "Reawakening to our Responsibilities in Post-Conciliar Years."

Workshops will be held on the following topics: Moonlighting Mother, Women in the Ecumenical Design, Integration or Segregation of Woman in Man's World.

Sunday, April 30 will be officially designated as A.A.S.H. Day at the Fair. Buses will take the delegates to the Expo Grounds where a reception and Tea will be extended to them at the Hospitality Center.

Attending from Rochester will be Mesdames James Cashman, James Conney, Albert Farley, Frank Lawlor, Rudolf Siebert, Henry Vosburgh and Miss Marion Leaty. Miss Mary Welch and Miss Helen Louise Whalen will act as Alternate Delegates from the Rochester Delegation. Mrs. Francis Dowling and Mrs. Raymond White will serve as official delegates. Mrs. White is president of the Rochester Alumnae Association.

Greece Towne Mall Public Opening, May 1

The Greece Towne Mall, suburban Rochester's first covered shopping mall, will be opened to the public on Monday, May 1. The announcement was made by William F. Wilmot, President of the Wilmore Corporation, developers of the 30-acre site on Ridge Road near Long Pond Road in the Town of Greece.

Wilmot indicated that 16 of the more than 40 stores in the Mall are anticipated to open on the first of May, following the Grand Opening Ceremonies.

One of the major tenants will be Sibley's who will be opening their seventh suburban location with a full-service, two level department store plus an adjoining budget store. Some of the other occupants of the center will be the National Clothing Company, Security Trust, Loblaw's and Waldert Opticians.

The Towne Mall will contain more than 365,000 square feet of retail selling space when completed, with more than two-thirds ready for the Grand Opening.

This first of the covered Mall centers offers the additional convenience of coatless shopping in year-round climate controlled temperatures, plus an attractive decor amidst landscaped planters, fountains and background music.
