

Bishop Sheen said Mass and gave the sermon at new Notre Dame Retreat House dedication rite.

'Mount of the Beatitudes'

Retreat House Dedicated

On a hilltop overlooking Canandaigua Lake, Bishop Sheen at the new Notre Dame Retreat House said he had the same feeling he had when he stood on the Mount of the Beatitudes overlooking the Lake of Galilee — and he hoped "the message will be the same too."

He spoke to close to 1500 people at an outdoor, afternoon Mass dedicating the new retreat house.

Thunder rumbled in the distance and a downpour of rain threatened throughout the Mass but nary a drop fell.

The Bishop said the retreat house was "an open window" for what he termed "the new spirituality."

The "old" spirituality, he said, was "individuals talking to individuals about God" and that the "new" form of spiritual development would take the form of "persons in union with other persons talking about Christ."

He stressed the need for people to be aware that their day to day heartaches and difficulties are "a sharing in the passion of the contemporary Christ." He cited St. Paul's frequent references to the continuing redemptive sufferings of Christ in His mystical body.

"There is great need for us more and more to get back to the life of Christ, with great emphasis on His humanity," Bishop Sheen said, "to realize His life was like ours . . . He was hungry, thirsty, exhausted, and He never turned the nails into roses."

He said this example of the Lord teaches us "we have to learn to live life as it is." He concluded by referring to the title of the retreat house, Notre Dame, and said the prayers of the Blessed Virgin Mary would form retreatants into the image of her Son spiritually as she long ago formed in her womb the physical body of the Saviour.

Redemptorist Father Gerald Whelan, retreat house rector, lead the congregation in the dedication litany prayer. Present were Redemptorist provincial Father Ronald G. Connors and consultant Father Francis Daley, Father William Jamison, former retreat director, and several other Redemptorist and diocesan priests.

Consultors From U.S.

Vatican City — (NC) — Four Americans, including a layman, have been named consultors for the Commission for the Revision of the Code of Canon Law.

The four are Msgr. Stephen Kelleher of New York; Father Frederick R. McManus of the Catholic University of America; Msgr. John Quinn of Chicago, and Stephen Kuttner, professor of history of canon law at Yale University.

Kuttner is one of five laymen now named to assist the commission in its revision of canon law in the light of the Vatican council's decisions. Named as consultors of the commission at the same time (Kuttner was nominated March 29) were Prof. Orio Giacchi of the Catholic University of Milan and Prof. Pedro Lombardia of the University of Navarre, Spain.

Aid For War Victims

Catholic Relief Services and The Church World Service Center have formed the Near East Bishops' Emergency Relief Fund to aid the victims of the Arab-Israeli conflict. They are appealing for clothing, medicine and money. If you are interested in contributing to this fund, please mail the items to Catholic Relief Services, 140 Morgan Ave., Brooklyn, New York 11237.

Pike Critics 'Small Gauge'

New York — (RNS) — Bishops seeking a heresy trial of Episcopal Bishop James A. Pike, recently resigned Bishop of California, were described by the rector of a fashionable Fifth Avenue church here as "small-gauge men" harboring personal resentments.

Dr. Frederick M. Morris, rector of St. Thomas' Episcopal church, told congregations at morning Holy Communion and Evensong services that the dispute is a "tragic example" of over-concern with partisan denominational matters. Instead, he said, this is a time when the leadership of the Episcopal Church needs to face squarely the broad ecumenical issue of church reunion.

Charges by a "Committee of Bishops to Defend the Faith" accuse Bishop Pike of heretical views.

Mission Work Together

Baden, Austria — (RNS) — Protestant missionaries were told to contact the Vatican Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity if they should have any difficulties with Roman Catholics in their mission areas.

"We are there to serve you," said Father August B. Hasler, a member of the secretariat.

The priest addressed 160 missionaries, mission agency officials and representatives of younger Churches in Asia and Africa who attended the enlarged annual meeting of the Lutheran World Federation's Commission on World Mission (CWM) here.

"If you should have difficulties," Father Hasler said, "with the Roman Catholic hierarchy in your mission fields, if you see proselytism on our side, if you don't succeed in having common Bible translation with us, and so forth, please write the Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity."

Although the Protestant-Catholic union cannot be foreseen at this time, Father Hasler maintained there are many opportunities for close cooperation.

"We as Christians have to give a common testimony to the world," he said. "There are already many possibilities — common worship, common study centers, common Bible translations . . ."
