

Aquinas Boys Set For Boston Parade

The American Legion parade to be held in Boston, Mass., on August 28 will have a special interest for Rochesterians this year. The flag of the City of Rochester will be carried by the Aquinas Institute Color Guard, a crack outfit which has won national acclaim over the past four years.

The parade will highlight the national convention of the American Legion and will feature the top musical and marching units of the country.

Prior to the parade a contest will be held to determine the top color guard in the nation. Last year, in Washington, D.C., the Aquinas Guard ranked seventh in the nation in competition with guards representing each of the states.

Last season the Aquinas boys walked off with the New York State American Legion title, the Veterans of Foreign Wars state championship and the Governor Rockefeller trophy at the State Fair in Syracuse. On August 29 the Aquinas Guard will defend its State Fair title, a championship it has won for four consecutive years.

Michael Christman of Sacred Heart Cathedral parish is the Aquinas Color Guard commander. Father John R. Whitley, C.S.B. is the instructor.

The 25 Aquinas students will stay at Boston College during their five day stay in Boston.

Other Rochester units expected to take part in the Legion convention are the Crusaders Drum Corps and the Emerald Statesmen Junior Drum Corps.

READY TO GO! Aquinas Institute's crack Color Guard snaps to attention in final practice before heading for Boston, where they will participate in the American Legion parade on Aug. 28.
