

Public School Pupils In Catholic School

Hicksville, N.Y. — (RNS) — Miss Helen McCormack conducts a class for her third graders in a classroom in Roman Catholic Holy Trinity high school in Hicksville, N.Y. The free space in the high school was offered to the Long Island town's public school system when the building the youngsters had been using was declared structurally unsafe. Observing the class in its new location are Father Andrew P. Connolly, Holy Trinity principal, and James F. Burke, public school principal.

New CU Rector's Goal:

Freedom for Faculty

Washington — (RNS) — The new acting rector of the Catholic University of America plans to put a fairly heavy stress on person-to-person diplomacy in administering the institution.

"I plan to de-emphasize the desk and emphasize the chairs and coffee cups in my office," Father John P. Whalen told a press conference here.

Managing editor of the New Catholic Encyclopedia and president of the theological publishing house, Corpus Instrumentorum, Father Whalen said that he plans to serve only one year as rector. He disclaimed any ambition to seek the full five-year term as permanent rector.

Father Whalen succeeds Bishop William J. McDonald, who completes his second five-year term on Nov. 9. The prelate announced in mid-July that he would leave the post at the end of his current term. He has been appointed Auxiliary Bishop of San Francisco.

When Father Whalen was asked by newsmen for his reaction to the boycott which shut down Catholic University in April of this year, he said he regretted that it had occurred. However, he looked on it with favor.

"The boycott represented creative tension," he said. "The faculty must be freed . . ."

The boycott was staged by more than 6,000 students and some 600 faculty members who protested the firing of Father Charles E. Curran, a professor of moral theology. It ended after six days with the priest's reinstatement.

Father Whalen told newsmen: "The one thing we can't stand is the kind of mediocrity that comes from a fear of making mistakes . . . It is not the purpose of a university to enforce unity of opinion. There should be creative tension between administration and faculty, faculty and staff, and the students.

He said the university is in a "period of profound transition," and noted that the problems leading to the boycott show the "correct chemistry" is present for this change.

In discussing his work with the theological publishing firm and his desire to return to it, he said, "This is a work that cannot, is not, and perhaps should not be done by a university."

A director of the Catholic Theological Society of America, he said that Corpus Instrumentorum will publish several theological works beginning next year.

Asked whether he thought Catholic University was "too conservative," he replied, "In some ways." He said the school, because of its location and what it represents, should be wielded "more impact in Catholic and national affairs" than it does.

As for himself, when asked whether he was liberal or conservative, Father Whalen borrowed the late Father John Courtney Murray's classic reply, "I believe I am at the radical center."

On a Wing And a Prayer

Vatican City — (RNS)—Pope Paul VI has written a special prayer for aviators, scheduled to be offered publicly for the first time at an international meeting of civil aviators in Loreto on Sunday, Oct. 1.

The text reads as follows:

"O Mary, Queen of the skies, glorious patroness of aviation, our prayer rises to you. We are pilots and aviators of the whole world. Launched into voyages through the skies, uniting nations and continents in bonds of solidarity we wish to be watchful and conscious instruments of peace and progress for our mother countries."
