

St. John Fisher College

Science Bldg. Construction Completion Date: Feb. '68 Will Be In Use This Summer

New Science Building goes up rapidly, assisted by a Swedish-made climbing crane above. Crane is dismantled and taken down after top story is finished. View at right from roof of adjoining St. Basil Hall shows new science building in relation to Administration Building.

St. John Fisher College's new Science building is taking shape rapidly and the entire building should be enclosed and ready for interior finishing and equipment installation by February, 1968.

Some classes will be in session in the new building next summer, and completely ready for the fall semester, 1968.

The new building completely houses the Physics and Biology Departments. As can be seen from the photographs above, it will be adjacent and connected to St. Basil Hall, which is also joined to the Chemistry Building. Between the three buildings there will be easy access for faculty and students.

Continuing Construction Stresses Need For Redemption Of All Pledges

As can be seen from the fast-paced construction above and that planned for the Library, there is a great need for all possible funds. These buildings were predicated on a high realization percentage, and so all pledgors are earnestly requested to examine closely this need on the campuses on Pitsoord and Fairport Road. Pastors are urged to call this to the attention of their parishioners and concentrate on follow-up procedures these last remaining months.

New Library To Be Started This Year

To accommodate the growth and development at St. John Fisher, the New Library building construction will commence in late 1967.

The proposed library will be situated some 40 yards east of the Administration Building with the entrance facing north. The architects, Giffels and Rossetti, have designed a building with three floors and a total area of some 60,000 square feet.

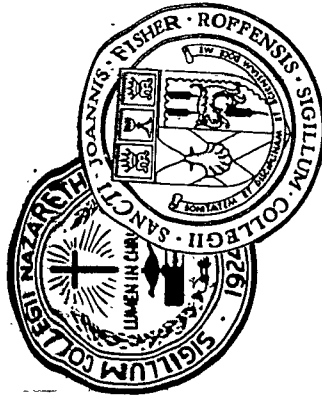

This will provide shelving space for approximately 150,000 volumes and seating for 600 students. This would account for about 40% of the projected 1,500 student body at the completion date in 1969. 70% of the seating will be composed of individual carrels, or library study desks.

The new three-story reinforced concrete structure will be fully carpeted and air-conditioned. It will have two typing rooms, two rooms for seminars plus six group study rooms. There will be six faculty studies in addition to the library offices. There is also a treasure room which will contain rare books, first editions, etc.

The exterior will be of a material and color to harmonize with the existing structures.

JOINT COLLEGE FUND Progress Report

Becket Hall, Nazareth Arts Center Virtually Complete, Good Progress At Fisher

Becket Hall, Rochester's new Diocesan House of Studies, is now a reality. It is now occupied and being used daily by our future priests. This new structure should prove to be a model for this type facility.

Msgr. Joseph L. Hogan, Rector, Becket Hall, reports:

"We have been assured of our personal enthusiasm and pride in our new home on St. John Fisher Campus by the spontaneous and enthusiastic approval of more than 3,000 of our good and generous benefactors who were able to accept our invitation to an Open House on Sunday, September 24th. For those unable to visit us then, we wish to say that every day is 'Open House' at Becket Hall. We want all our people to see what they have done for the future priests of our Diocese.

"The building is complete and fulfills all our hopes and plans. It has the brightness and warmth that a home should have and represents the creative imagination of all who planned it.

"But all of this has to be a reflection of a joyous spirit of charity of the members of our family on Campus if the sacrifice of our priests and people are to be justified.

"We pledge our best efforts to establish such a spirit. We are not just another Residence Hall on campus. Our students are reminded of this constantly. This community life is a new experience for most of our students and it requires consistent training in the abandonment of selfishness.

"Our life centers around our Eucharistic Lord

One Hundred and Eight Seminarymen remember in their daily prayers at Mass their benefactors, the contributors to the Joint College Fund. Msgr. Joseph L. Hogan, Rector, celebrates Mass on the octagonal, Travertine-marble altar in the new Chapel. The Altar of Reservation is behind him. Pews are being installed to give a semi-circular seating effect.

Who alone can bring us to the realization of our fond hopes.

"Our observation of our programs to date have not dimmed our optimism. There are indeed many healthy signs of the value of this program: it has attracted five students from the Fisher Campus all through the power of the example of our dedicated seminarians; it has helped many by their own admission to make early in life a decision about their vocation and it has made the conduct of the unworthy more obvious as they abuse the freedom offered them."

Nazareth Arts Center In Use

The award-winning Arts Center at Nazareth College was in partial use during the summer and is practically in full use now. Classes are in session in the Art and Music Wings, even though final touches of installation and painting remain. The new Auditorium seems to have caught the eye of the Rochester theatre groups. College and outside activities for the remainder of the school year have completely filled the schedule for the new 1,100 seat theatre.
