

Youth Faith Rejection Worries Jewish Leaders

Katmiesha Lake, N.Y.—(RNS) The opening of communication lines between Jewish college age youths and the synagogue was a major concern here of the United Synagogue of America, the Jewish Conservative Movement's congregational organization.

On the other hand, said Danny Siegel, 20, a student at Rutgers University and president of Atid ("Future," the organization's college group), "the main group of college youth reject the institutions of their parents."

Rabbi Saul I. Teplitz, of Woodmere, L.I., chairman of the National Youth Commission of United-Synagogue, urged "the institution of the synagogue" to "take a new look at itself" to find out why it was losing the loyalty of the present college generation.

Studies, he said, showed that in another 10 to 20 years, approximately 90 per cent of the American Jewish community would be college educated.

"We teachers and leaders of the Jewish people must stop answering questions that no one is asking," he warned, "and start speaking in terms relevant to our young people."

Beefing About The Beef

Nowgong, India — (NC) — A Catholic school here was the subject of a police investigation after a complaint that it served beef to Hindu pupils, thus offending their religious beliefs.

Father N. M. Joseph, rector of Loyola School, denied the charge. Though the visiting police found beef being cooked, Father Joseph explained that it was for Christian members of the staff and was served to them separately. He declared that Hindus at the school served only mutton, fish, chicken and eggs.

City Organist Featured At Lithuanian Meeting

Zeno Nomeika, organist at St. Andrew's Church on Portland Avenue, was the featured soloist in a program of religious music closing the American Lithuanian Roman Catholic Federation Conference held recently in Chicago.

Trimikas, S.J., editor of a monthly magazine published in America by the Lithuanian Jesuit Fathers, and Lithuanian Bishop-in-exile, His Excellency Vincencas Brizgys.

The closing concert of religious music was held at Holy Cross Church of Chicago, host for the ALRCF conference, and featured in addition to Nomeika, soprano Dana Stankaitis, and a string quartet.

Nomeika's program included the "Fantasy and Fugue" in G Minor by J. S. Bach; "Le Banquet Celeste" and "God's Children" by O. Messiaen; "Carpenter's" by Leo Sowerby; "Improvizations" by J. Kacinskas, and the "Finale" from the First Organ Symphony by L. Viena.
