

Pope Paul to Elevate 35 to Cardinals

 In his year as Archbishop of New York, Cardinal-designate Cooke, 48, the youngest of the 10 U.S. cardinals, has already made an impressive record in the fields of social action and ecumenical activity.

The successor to the late Francis Cardinal Spellman has stressed continuity with his close friend and predecessor since in installation on April 4, 1968, but has also repeatedly cited the need for the Church to adapt its structures and procedures to changing times.

A veteran social worker with close and extensive personal contacts in New York's large Negro and Puerto Rican communities, Archbishop Cooke has encouraged experimental pastoral work and social action apostolates among these minorities. He appointed the first Negro pastor in the history of the archdiocese, Father Harold A. Salmon of St. Charles Borromeo church, Harlem, and designated Father Salmon as his vicar delegate in Harlem.

He has departed from tradition by pledging to consult with priests before giving them new assignments, by appointing his vicar general for a limited three-year term and by asking his clergy to submit nominations for "various diocesan offices." He has offered Mass on the steps of New York's city hall and before a folk-singing congregation of 12,000 in Central Park.

A native of New York City, the new cardinal was born on March 21, 1921, and ordained in 1946.

As chairman of the American Bishops' Committee for Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs since its establishment in 1966, Cardinal-designate Carberry, 64, of St. Louis, has been the official ecumenical leader and spokesman for the bishops during a period of rapid advance toward greater Christian unity.

The archbishop, long an active ecumenist, is also the co-chairman of a 36-member official liaison group which has been working on relations between the bishops and the National Council of Churches.

Besides his ecumenical involvement, the prelate is best-known as an expert on Canon Law. He is a former president of the Canon Law Society of America.

Archbishop Carberry has been the head of his present diocese (the fifth he has served as a priest or bishop) for just over a year. He was installed as Archbishop of St. Louis, succeeding the late Joseph Cardinal Ritter, on March 25, 1968.

Born in Brooklyn on July 31, 1904, he was ordained in 1929 after studies at the North American College in Rome.

Cardinal-designate Dearden, 61, the prelate who has headed Church renewal in the United States since being elected president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops (NCCB) and the United States Catholic Conference (NSCC), is best known in Detroit as a bishop deeply concerned with the problems of the people of his archdiocese.

He is a tall, (6 foot 1) personable man, with a slight touch of an Irish brogue, who believes that his place in the Catholic community is as a functioning chief pastor.

As a man who has sat in on black power meetings in order to learn more about what black militants are trying to say, he has a feeling for the pulse of the community.

Bishop Wright, 59, of Pittsburgh, who will be given a high appointment in the Roman Curia after he-coming a cardinal on April 28, has long been recognized as one of the most eloquent, versatile and experienced Catholic churchmen in the United States.

He was singled out for special mention by Archbishop Luigi Raimondi, Apostolic Delegate to the U.S., in a statement on the appointment of the four new American cardinals. "The appointment of Bishop John J. Wright to serve the Curia in Rome is of special significance," Archbishop Raimondi said. "It is evidence of the Holy Father's desire to draw upon prelates from various parts of the world to assist him in the central administration of the Church."

The new post which will be given to the American prelate has not been announced and such appointments customarily are not made until after the consistory at which the new cardinals are elevated. But unofficial sources have spoken of two possible appointments: The Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity, whose first president, Augustine Cardinal Bea, died in November, and the Vatican Secretariat of State, whose head, 86-year-old Amleto Cardinal Cicognani, is reportedly planning to retire.

Born in Boston on July 18, 1909, Bishop Wright was ordained in December, 1935 after studies at the North American College in Rome.

When the new cardinals are given their Red Hats, the list of American Princes will include, besides those just elevated, the following six prelates, listed in order of seniority: James Cardinal McIntyre, Archbishop of Los Angeles; Richard Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of Boston; Lawrence Cardinal Shehan, Archbishop of Baltimore; Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, D.C.; John Cardinal Krol, Archbishop of Philadelphia; and John Cardinal Cody, Archbishop of Chicago.

Since the year 1875 up to the present moment, 26 American prelates have been named to the Sacred College of Cardinals, the first being John McCloskey, Archbishop of New York, who was elevated in 1875 by Pope Pius IX.

All-Night Vigils Reflect Young Hope of Church

 priests and people to sing praise to the Risen One.

Our story mounts as we begin four lessons and four songs from Sacred Scripture, telling of the origins of the cosmos, the goodness of God to our fathers, how He liberated us from slavery of both the flesh and the spirit, our visions of the future and His sombre warning of the price of our infidelity to His plan.

Then we call out the names of those present who have gone before us in the light of faith; we begin chanting the Litany of the Saints, building up to the blessing of the Easter water and the conferral of Baptism with the renewing of the baptismal promises of the faithful.

All of what has gone before has been a prelude to this moment when we put to death the old man and his sinfulness and rise one with a new creation redeemed in the blood of the Lamb.

About midnight, the ministers prepare for the sacrifice-banquet of the Eucharist; and we return to calling on the saints and asking their intercession. Then there is a short epistle containing the words "since you have been raised with Christ, seek the things above," to which we say yes by singing the great Easter Alleluia.

As Augustine said: "we are Resurrection-Christians and Alleluia is our song."

Archbishop Flahiff Has Many Local Connections

Cardinal-designate George Bernard Flahiff, 64, archbishop of Winnipeg, Man., has many Rochester connections.

He was Superior General of the Basilian Fathers from 1954 to 1961 and during the same period was a member of St. John Fisher College and Aquinas Institute's boards of trustees. Basilian fathers staff Aquinas and Fisher.

In 1964 he delivered the commencement address at St. John Fisher and received an honorary doctor of laws degree from the then Auxiliary Bishop Lawrence B. Casey.

While serving on the Aquinas board, Archbishop Flahiff was a frequent visitor to the school and last summer attended a conference of Basilian fathers at Fisher.
