NEW NEWS NOTES

If you've been following us in these little "chats" each week you know that MONEY LABELS is a truly unique method of gathering in ye olde dollars. From the top-down, every single person involved in this program stands to realize a profit. What other fund-raising project ever devised can make this claim? That's why it's to the advantage of any and all organizations to seriously considering joining.

In all other fund-raisers, whether they involve an outright cash donation, the purchase of a card-party or raffle ticket, the making of baked goods, etc., etc., the giver seldom profits. The same can be said for the chairman of the event and his or her committee. There are few if any paid personnel among church, charitable or civic groups! Both workers and contributors do it all "for free".

This is what makes MONEY LABELS an entirely different proposition. From top to bottom, from first to last, every individual who participates can look forward to some profit. Under these conditions, it would seem downright foolish to pass up such an opportunity. The very least you could do is investigate.

To help you "get the facts", we've prepared a MONEY LABELS brochure. This explains the program and answers some of the questions you may have. You may obtain this brochure and other M/L literature, by calling either 548-5140 or 865-1554. Those not within convenient phoning distance may fill out the coupon below and mail it to Money Labels, Courier Journal 35 Scoop St., Rochester, N.Y. 14604.

Stella Maris.. Still Growing at 43

Camp Stella Maris, diocesan camp on Conesus Lake, which will open for its 43rd season this summer has come a long way in the past 42 years. The first season saw 12 campers enrolled. This year an estimated 1,600 boys and girls will take part.

The idea for a diocesan camp originated with Msgr. Gerald Lambert, then a student at St. Bernard's Seminary. In the summer of 1926, he proposed the project to a former classmate, Eugene B. Hudson, and together they went through the trials of setting up a program, raising funds, and carrying through the first season.

After that first year's experience they gained the sympathetic ear of the late Max Russer Sr. He listened to their problem of trying to run a camp without a permanent location, and decided to do something about it. By the summer of 1927 Camp Stella Maris opened its second season on its present site at East Lake Road and Van Zandt Road with 40 campers per week over a period of eight weeks.

In 1930 Bishop J. F. O'Hern recognized Camp Stella Maris as an official diocesan institution, and improvements and additions followed rapidly. A new chapel was constructed in 1937, designed by Thomas Bryan after the pattern of an old Indian Lodge house.

In subsequent years six cabins were constructed, one named after the co-founder of Camp Stella Maris, the late Father Eugene B. Hudson, one after the former Diocesan Camp, Morning Star, where Msgr. Lambert worked when he thought of a similar camp for the Diocese of Rochester, and one after the man responsible for the present camp site, Max Russer.

In the 1950's the four latest white cabins were added. In the war years of 1944-45, bad weather rendered the chapel unusable, but it was repaired through a fund-raising campaign sponsored by former campers.

In 1940, "Star Dust" was started—a souvenir news sheet of highlights and lowlights of the week distributed at the end of each encampment. "Star Dust" helps extend the encampment—just a little longer—for the camper by listing the names of campers and addresses of counselors so that letters can reach new friends.

In 1941 Camp Stella Maris opened a girls' season for the first time. Last year 490 girls were enrolled over a period of three encampments.

Stella Maris has grown from a little cottage to a group of service buildings covering 20 acres. In addition to these buildings, which provide kitchen, mess hall, hospital, office, craft rooms, small theatre and storage space, the camp is equipped with 10 cabins, a rustic chapel, a convent for the Sisters of Mercy and a home for the Priest Director.

Its 500 feet of waterfront is equipped with boats, docks, and diving boards. There are facilities for 180 campers per week everything from water skiing to boondoggling is offered for the boys; there is a staff of 23 counselors chosen from seminaries from the Rochester, Baltimore, Boston, and Ogdensburg areas. School teachers, along with college and senior high school girls, care for the girl campers.

This year the camp will open on June 22. There will be six periods of encampment for boys (ages 7-15) beginning June 22 and ending August 2, and three encampments for girls (ages 8-14) from Aug. 3 to 23, with an option to combine certain periods to form longer encampments.

Confrontation A 'Now' Program

By JOAN ZUMMO

Today's layman, depending on who is describing him, is everything from the Church's salvation to its damnation, is everything from emerging to submerging, is liberal, is reactive, is involved, is indifferent. Most will agree, however, on one thing that today's layman is not—and that is ignored.

He is realizing and asserting the fact that he is by virtue of his baptism into the Church, an extension of Christ into our time and our world just as truly and importantly as is the clergy. It is because of this impact that the layman is beginning to have in the Church that a lay organization such as CCD is so important.

One person who is making a significant impact on Christian life in the Diocese through her involvement in the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine is Mrs. Ronald Gledhill of Christ the King Parish.

The mother of four children and active in a variety of volunteer works, Mrs. Gledhill was one of the pioneers in the CCD program, having taken the CCD teacher training course at the Fairport School of Religion fifteen years ago.

She is a member of the CCD Lay Advisory Board and serves as the principal of the School of Religion at Christ the King Parish. She noted that the CCD task is to make Christ known to the students, then to understand that education cannot be a set and static experience. "Education requires change," she said. "We must be willing to experiment and try new approaches. Christianity has to be a NOW experience."

Since Christianity essentially is becoming acquainted with and responding to the person of Christ, teachers must be able to establish a person to person relationship with the students, Mrs. Gledhill said.

A third area that needs attention, according to Mrs. Gledhill, is the development and use of forms of liturgical expression that are meaningful for children.

"We must build up a sense of liturgical participation by having children worship together in ways appropriate to their ages and stages of development, by having them experience community worship with their peers and family," she said.

In summary, since "Christian living" we must not reduce Christian Education to a set of facts and rules, but rather must convey Christ to our students in such a way that He can be a meaningful basis for their lives.

CCD Book List

By SISTER GILMARY and RITA DEVOLDRE

Catechesis of Revelation, by Gabriel Moran (Herder and Herder, $4.50). This book, together with Theology of Revelation have become basic readings for the catechist of today. Brother Moran shows concern for human freedom in its deepest dimensions and the need for a theologically integrated program of religious instruction.

Morality for our Time, by Marc Oraison (Doubleday, $3.95). This priest-psychologist-theologian deals with a problem that is often a concern for the teacher who feels that there is a lack of emphasis on the Ten Commandments.

1,029 Private Prayers for Worldly Christians, by Gerard Pottebaum and Joyce Winkel (Pflaum, $5.95). Difficult to describe, better to see, best to use and pray with. Prayers from the Psalms, photographs and advertisements can be combined in a thousand ways.

The World of Art—The World of Youth, by Paul A. Schuivogel (Augustus, $2.50). Discussion of the media "designed to aid the adults in understanding the perception and involvement of young people in the arts and help in training young people to be perceptive as their lives intersect" with these media.

Speaking of Religious Education, by Gerard S. Sloyan (Herder and Herder, $5.95). A noted leader of religious education explores practical questions on the role of religious education in the parochial schools, and teachers.

Nazareth Girl Gets Scholarship

Elizabeth A. Zimmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter R. Zimmer, 2829 Nicholas Road, Spencerport, and an honor senior at Nazareth Academy, has received a National Merit Scholarship through which she intends to study biochemistry at Cornell University.

Elizabeth, oldest of seven children, received the scholarship "in recognition of outstanding performance and promise for intellectual achievement."

It was presented to her by the Singer Co. Her father, an inspector at the Grafex Division of the firm, has been employed there for 28 years. Elizabeth also received a State Regents Scholarship and other awards for her participation in activities at Nazareth.

VERDI OPERA GROUP IN ST. LAWRENCE CONCERT TOMORROW

The Verdi Opera Society, under the direction of Vincent B. Faga, will present a concert at 8 tomorrow night, May 24, at St. Lawrence School Hall, North Greece Road.

In addition to solo and choral selections from opera and current shows, two of Benny Prestant's songs will be presented. Samuel Rizzo, violinist, will play one of Professor Faga's compositions, and the director will play a Bach flute suite. Dorothy Pike Buckley will be piano accompanist.

Bishop Schedules 3rd Adult Talk

Bishop Fulton J. Sheen will give his third and final talk on "Tenets of Faith" as part of the Adult Theology Program at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 27, at Nazareth Academy, Lake Avenue. Other adult courses are now in progress in Geneva, Canandaigua, Hammondsport, Batavia and Wayland.
