

Statewide CCD Plan Set Up at Meeting

The State Diocesan Director of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine (CCD) and staff members recently completed two days of meetings at Lakewood, discussing Catholic religious education in the state.

The highlight of the meeting was the acceptance of a constitution giving definite form to a statewide association of Catholic religious educators. The group will be known as the New York Confraternity Directors (NYCD) and will coordinate religious education programs for the state's 692,138 children in CCD.

Father Daniel Holland, assistant director of CCD in the Rochester Diocese, said that this action "was a significant step forward in organizing the many Catholic voices in the state."

The NYCD is working on the following goals: 1) research defining present and future job opportunities for religious men and women in the field of religious education and CCD; 2) research and communication concerning the responsibilities and requirements for parish and regional religious education coordinators; 3) improvement for a legal framework of religious time religious instruction in the state; 4) a state-wide effort to improve existing programs of adult religious education and teacher training.

The religious educators also placed heavy emphasis on adult religious education.

"In our time," one director commented, "increasing demands are being made of Diocesan CCD offices in the area of adult religious education. We are asked to do more to train religion teachers both religious and lay. We are asked to plan and coordinate parish adult religious education programs. We are even asked to provide leadership in the critical area of continuing religious education of priests and sisters. These seem to be the areas of greatest challenge to CCD in our times."

Batavia School To Stay Open

Batavia—St. Mary's School, faced with the prospect of discontinuance at the end of this month, will remain open.

Because its annual $10,000 budget would have to be increased $17,500 for the next school year, and faced with a shortage of teaching nuns, it earlier had been decided to close the school.

During the last few weeks however, parishioners contributed or pledged a total of $13,000, and indicated continuing efforts to raise the additional $4,500.

At a meeting of nearly 100 parishioners Monday night it was voted to keep the school open.

A message for people who think it is embarrassing to ask for a loan.

We know what it's like. We know exactly how you feel. But think of it this way when you need money: We help more people with more loans than anybody else in this area. And we know that much of our business depends on making your loan a comfortable experience. So we prepared this message in the interest of uncovering those little signs of embarrassment when it comes to borrowing money. To examine them, and to dispel them. If you fit this picture, come in and talk to us.

We'll try our best to put you at ease. Lincoln Rochester

A typical borrower gets flushed cheeks. Oh sure, he figures it's OK for Joe down the street to borrow money. Or Harry around the corner. But, for him, it's an embarrassing experience. We usually help by telling him that Lincoln Rochester made over 18,000 personal loans last year.

Note the parched lips. Yes, our borrower knows that huge corporations borrow money. And municipalities. And even foreign countries. But... well, we get a slight smile when we tell him that we made personal loans of almost $24 million last year.

The hiding place of butterflies. Sure, he feels as though he slept in his suit, his shoes are unshined, and there's a smudge of dirt on his cheek. But he just feels that way. We tell him he looks good to us.

See the nervous-fingers? OK, suppose our borrower did forget his address when the loan officer asked for it. And almost missed the chair. And broke a fingernail as he sat down. Fast processing of his application at any of Lincoln Rochester's 37 offices usually overcomes this kind of nervousness.

Dry throats are not uncommon. When the typical borrower specifies how much he'll need to buy a car, remodel a kitchen, or take a vacation notice how his voice kind of skitters up an octave or two. Sometimes, we offer a life saver.
