Brazilian Priest Murder Brings Vehement Protest

Rio De Janeiro — (NC) — Brazilian clergy and laity made vehement protest this week over the murder of a 28-year-old priest at the hands of ultra-rightists.

Statements issued by Archbishop Helder Camara of Recife and by priests of the archdiocese of Rio de Janeiro protested the government's news-suppression of the killing in May of Father Pereira Neto, a youth moderator, whose body was found near the State University of Recife. He had apparently been tortured before

Father Neto of Recife "was killed not for the fact that he was a priest, but because he had the courage to protest against the existing oppression in Brazil," the document added.

The document endorsed a statement by Archbishop Helder Camara of Olinda and Recife that "as a Church, we must pledge our loyalty to the struggle for the total liberation of our Archbishop Camara's statement said: "What is most serious in this crime, aside from its extreme perversity—the victim was bound, stabbed and shot on the head—is the certainty that this brutal killing emerges from a pre-established plan, well announced through threats and warning.

"First there were written threats on the walls of church buildings, often followed by fire-arms blasts. The Manguinos residence was covered with signs, the archdiocesan secretariat and the headquarters of the Second Northeast Regional Plan were machinegunned. The residence of the archbishop at Fronteras was also machinegunned and marked with warnings written with tar."

The Pastoral Office today announced the retirement of three pastors of the diocese, the appointment of six priests to pastoral duties and changes of assignment for 22 other priests.

In issuing the formal announcement, Bishop Fulton J. Sheen put a special preface on the list:

"The following appointments of the Pastoral Office are made after a three-fold consultation:

"1. The members of the Pastoral Office themselves.

"2. The Priests' Council represented by four elected members who swore themselves to secrecy and who meet on three different occasions. "3. The consultation with those who were named to inquire of their willingness to accept the new appoint-

Debate Arises About

Permanent Diaconate

Detroit - (NC) - Although considerable controversy has surrounded the structure of the permanent diaconate program scheduled to open at Sacred Heart Seminary here in the fall, John Cardinal Dearden of Detroit has made the decision to proceed as planned.

Since May 15, when the program was outlined, inner-city vicars, priests and interested parties have argued that the permanent diaconate plan supposedly was being designed for use by the black community.

Auxiliary Bishop Walter J. Schoenherr, in announcing the cardinal's decision, said 26 men already have submitted applications for the program. He said it is the cardinal's decision that these men should be given the opportunity to complete the two-year program which will lead to their ordination as deacons.

"I feel that the inner-city complaints are against Rome," Bishop Schoenherr said, "rather than against those of us who have worked to formulate this program. If we are going to have a diaconate, we have to follow rules laid down by Rome.

"The inner-city's basic objections to the program concern the minimum age of 35 and the celibacy-marriage stipulation," he said. "This is not to say that there cannot be exceptions from the guidelines. Bishop Fulton J. Sheen of Rochester just received a dispensation to ordain a 34-year-old.'

"The Cardinal is not averse to a lay leadership program being set up. but the men graduating from the program cannot be called deacons,' Bishop Schoenherr said.

The permanent diaconate program came under heavy fire primarily for demanding that all applicants be over the age of 35, and that they be married. If they are single or a widower, applicants may not marry after they are ordained deacons.
