

Help Young Bring Treasures Home from Great Outdoors

Whether your trip is to the woods, the lake or the seashore, there are always "treasures" of one kind or another that budding young scientists like to bring back. Maybe it's for "show and tell" or for display "purses" or simply because it's collect things — all kinds of things.

Whatever the reason, there's no place like the Great Outdoors for stimulating the curiosity of young minds and no better people than parents to introduce little folk to the wonders of Nature.

When parents will join their children on these woodland treks for two seasons. One is starting the happy experiences of the forest, field or stream, observing animal specimens of their own making in a place where, inevitably, no human foot has ever set — and the other is to bring home the treasures of their own discovery.

Equally important, although considerably less dramatic, is the matter of self-defense. The prospect of getting home a bear, a fox, a rabbit, a squirrel, a bird, a snake, a frog, a toad, a turtle, a shell, a stone, a leaf, a flower, a fern, a mushroom, a rock, a piece of wood, a piece of bark, a piece of moss, a piece of lichen, a piece of fungus, a piece of insect, a piece of animal, a piece of plant, a piece of mineral, a piece of fossil, a piece of meteorite, a piece of gemstone, a piece of jewelry, a piece of art, a piece of history, a piece of science, a piece of nature, a piece of life, a piece of death, a piece of everything.

Beautiful examples of treasures discovered in the great outdoors are legitimized when furnished with tight-fitted containers such as mom's favorite Tupperware, arranged as a special kit for the little. Thus, mother, she can feel more secure and more about surprises during up in the car on the way home.

When the child returns home with their treasures, the parent can be sure that the treasures are safe and sound. The child can be sure that the treasures are safe and sound. The parent can be sure that the treasures are safe and sound. The child can be sure that the treasures are safe and sound. The parent can be sure that the treasures are safe and sound.

The dream of having a "slice of the good life" has become a reality for millions of Americans and more families are turning to the great outdoors for their recreation. They are discovering great outdoors right in their own backyards.

Transforming a yard into an enjoyable living area is simple. A personal pool can be developed easily and inexpensively. It can provide the ticket away from it all without leaving home.

Versatility is the key for the entire family. A backyard complex of playground, a garden site, a swimming pool, a perfect place to entertain.

Elegance also has its place in the yard, where once a mom can help set the scene can change eas

Although the price has recently fallen, infra-red heaters are providing instant comfort in outdoor living.

Railroads use infra-red heaters to keep switches unfrozen. They are used in work areas where the chill of winter is particularly bothersome when temperatures begin to dip in the spring or autumn.

Utilizing radiant heaters, the heat is emitted in the form of light and can be directed to the spot where it is needed. When installed, the device can be used for picnics, barbecues, pool parties, or even for warming up a car.

None of the heat emitted is lost to the air. In recent mid-western winters, Wisconsin camping trailers have been able to move campsite without heaters or gloves — even in temperatures which drop to zero.

Infra-red heaters are ideal for outdoor living. They are portable and can be used in any location. They are easy to use and they are safe. They are the perfect solution for outdoor living.
