

Watch Out for Mid-Day Sun, Say the Experts
 The mid-day sun has been known to do more damage to sports-minded people than actual mishaps while playing a game. Since illnesses caused by heat can be serious and at times fatal, be sure to drink plenty of water and take buffered salt tablets to replace body salts lost through perspiration.

Flying Makes It Matter Of Hours Only

Convenient, versatile, safe, and relatively inexpensive private flying has come a long way since the days of the "barnstorming" pilot, thanks to major advancements in airplane design and development of the modern airways system. In contrast to the image of an irresponsible "daredevil" of twenty years ago, who staked his life on the structural integrity of a canvas and balling wire "crate" every time he left the ground, the modern private pilot is a trained and competent person operating a highly developed machine.

Paralleling this, today's personal airplanes are not only quieter, faster, and more versatile, but also extremely easy to fly.

The design features of a modern general aviation airplane, such as a Cessna, include tricycle landing gear for easy take-offs and landings, all-metal construction for strength and long life, broad span wing flaps for precise control during descents and take-offs from short fields, and advanced instrumentation which can even include multiple navigational radios and an automatic pilot.

Know Where You Are

The pilot of today doesn't just soar into the sky hoping that he can find a convenient road or railroad track to follow to his destination. He knows, at all times, exactly where he is.

In addition, experienced specialists, employed by the Federal Aviation Administration, stand ready to assist him via radio communication from the ground.

FAA flight service stations offer weather and route information, communications, and airborne assistance to pilots around the clock. Most of those operating such stations are pilots themselves.

Navigation is Simple

Navigation is a simple matter. Hundreds of radio stations are located strategically through the United States and other countries to provide radio navigation beams which can be tracked simply at the touch of a dial on the instrument panel.

The modern airways system is made up of these aids which are the electronic equivalent of a highway system on the ground and are available to everyone. Today's personal airplane usually contains an electronic receiver to follow aerial highways and radios to communicate with stations on the ground.

In addition to basic radios for navigation and communication, personal airplanes can be equipped with instruments to fly in the clouds.

When private pilots and their families are ready to go, it is simply a matter of loading the spacious baggage compartment of their aircraft and parking the car. Here the convenient outside luggage door of the Cessna Cardinal makes the loading job easy. Then it's up, up, and away.
